

LIBRARY HAS RELICS LIBRARY HELP INCREASED

Old Copy of "The Citizen," First Flag Made in Oregon, and Ancient Books Among Articles

An old newspaper, the first flag made in Oregon, a piece of the Confederate flag that waved over the capitol at Richmond for four years, a Confederate $10 note, a Lincoln gavel, and some ancient books, compose the list of relics in the University Library.

The old newspaper is a copy of the last wall-paper edition of The Citizen, issued at Vicksburg, Mississippi, in July, 1863. The Confederates had used all their paper and were forced to print The Citizen on wall paper. On July 2, 1863, the last issue of this paper went to press, but before the printing had been finished, Grant had captured the city. There is a little note in the lower right hand corner of the paper dated July 4, 1863, apparently written by the Union soldiers, saying that no more would The Citizen appear on wall-paper, and that the inhabitants of Vicksburg would no longer have to eat rats.

The gavel is made from a tree that Abraham Lincoln planted while a boy, and contains the names of all the Presidents since Lincoln until McKinley. The tree from which the gavel was made was cut down upon the death of Lincoln.

A Union flag, which was made by Mrs. A. I. Beebe when she was a little girl, and presented by her to the Library, is thought to be the first flag in the State of Oregon. It was made on the east side of the Cascade mountains during the early days. The flag is kept in the Library vault in the basement.

There are several old volumes of books on the relic shelf that date back to the time of Shakespeare. The old manuscripts are all written in Greek and Latin and are bound in heavy paper of large size. The age of the books is easily shown by the musty and yellow appearance of the covers and the pages.

STUDENTS GENERALLY FAVOR PROPOSED COMPULSORY TAX

all who do not pay are the most able to meet this obligation. The University will get the money when the treasurers cannot."

Lee Hendricks: "The main argument for the amendment is that it will catch the dead-beats. It isn't right that only a few should support class activities. Finances will be on such a firm basis that any class can handle its Oregon without difficulty."

William Holt: "I'm strongly in favor of the amendment. It will make it easier on both the treasurer and on the class itself, because they will get the money, when before they did not. It will be an injustice to no one. As it now is those who do not pay are better able than those who do. Last but not least, there will be no debts left over for the next class to pay."

Merlin Batley: "Fine amendment—should have been here in the past. There now exists an injustice to a certain portion of the students. The rest leave the burden to the more willing. It will also assure a more systematic method of book-keeping. The class advisory board will be a fine thing."

Elton Loucks: "The amendment is fair to everyone. Now about two-thirds are paying for the whole thing, while the rest are receiving the same benefits. Students have as much money at the first of the year as they do at any time, and the payment of all fees at once will save a lot of clerical work. An accurate budget can be drawn up because the resources will be definitely known."

Anthony Jaureguy: "It is the only way to place the class finances on a working basis. All treasurers are greatly overworked."

The Daily Student, of Indiana University, is being used in one of the Freshman English courses as a text book. Each day the paper is pulled to pieces and its good and bad points are shown.

Assistant Cataloguer and Desk Assistants Will be Employed for Next Year

That there will be an additional working force in the library next year is an assurance, according to Mr. Douglass. Miss Martha Spafford, at present engaged in the Vermont Agricultural College library, has been selected to work with Miss Barker as Assistant Cataloguer, and will begin work in July.

Then, too, there are to be new assistants at the desk, where at present help is most needed. These have not yet been chosen, but will be on hand when the fall term begins. Librarian Douglass, accompanied by Miss Barker, Miss Potter and Mrs. McClain, attended a meeting of the Pacific Northwest Library Association in Salem yesterday. On leaving Salem, Mr. Douglass will journey to San Francisco to view the Exposition, and to be present at a convention of the American Library Association.

From California, he will go to Iowa to take part in a class reunion at his old college, Grinnell. He is expected back on the fourth or fifth of July.

Students at the University of Michigan who can think of no easier way of breaking their necks now have a course in aeronautics at their disposal. The university has procured an aeroplane for use in instruction.

MAUDE ADAMS TO BE SEEN HERE THIS MONTH

Maude Adams having completed her tour of the East, has now entered on one of the longest tours of the Far West that has ever been arranged for by Charles Frohman. In easy stages the actress and her company will travel to California, taking in all of the important cities on the way. At the close of her San Francisco engagement Miss Adams will visit Portland and Seattle. She will also visit British Columbia, where she is a very great favorite. The tour embraces more cities than the actress has ever before visited in the confines of one theatrical year, and it will keep her busy until the middle of summer.

Will be seen at the Eugene Theatre Thursday, June 1.

LOUISE GRASSLER IN "OMAR, THE TENTMAKER"

Louise Grassler, who plays the leading role in support of Guy Bates Post in "Omar, the Tentmaker," coming shortly to the Eugene Theatre for a return engagement of one night, portrays both youth and maturity. In the first part of the play she enacts the youthful sweetheart, Shireen, of the beloved poet, Omar Khayyam, interpreted by Mr. Post. But the true calibre of her acting is best attested in later scenes. Torn from her lover, Shireen is married to the Shah and later cast off by him to die in the desert. From this plight she is rescued by murdering marauders who force her to join their band. Thus for many years the erstwhile Shireen, now known as the Evil Banou, is forced to roam the deserts and participate, silently at least, in many atrocities. Thus it will be seen that while Miss Grassler portrays, during the earlier passages of the play, a sweet, lovable young girl, she later has to characterize a full-fledged adventuress. No small test of histrionic virtuosity.

Bezdek turned out to watch his nine under another head and another name play Rupert's "Monarchs," of Portland, yesterday. The boys were beaten, but all wished the coach had seen them work the day before when they triumphed 2 to 1.
