

COMMERCE SCHOOL WILL SWAP TEACHERS WITH SOUTH AMERICA

Exchange Plan Proposed By President Campbell to Develop Trade Relations.

University Will Receive Direct Knowledge of Foreign Market Conditions from Expert

An exchange of professors between the School of Commerce of the University of Oregon and some one of the universities of South America is the plan of President P. L. Campbell who has taken the initial steps to bring about this closer relation commercially through the medium of education.

"Ignorance always means prejudice and lost opportunities. Knowledge is the beginning of trade as well as of friendship," is the way President Campbell puts it, realizing that one of the duties of the School of Commerce is to further the prosperity of the state in every way that is within the province of an educational institution of this kind.

The intention is that the man who will come here from South America shall be conversant with the commercial trade and possibilities of trade, the natural resources and manufactured products of his part of the world, with special reference to the demands of the Pacific Northwest and particularly Oregon, and that he shall instruct the students of the School of Commerce of this University along these lines of commercial development of the relations between Oregon and South America. In addition, he will teach the Spanish language, giving particular attention to its use and forms in business relations, the more or less technical phraseology of trade and trading, rather than its more purely literary features and use.

Conversely, the men who will go from the School of Commerce of this University will be familiar with the resources of the Northwest and especially Oregon and will have made a special and detailed study of all those products of Oregon for which a South American trade can and should be developed. This knowledge he will transmit to the University to which he is credited, as well as teaching commercial English to the students there.

The School of Commerce of the University of Oregon believes that this exchange of instructors to be one of the most practical and efficient methods of developing commercial relations with other countries. The man who will be sent from the School of Commerce to South America to teach English and Commerce, will be sent by the Director of the School of Commerce on a trip throughout the state to make a detailed study of the lumber, paper, box making, furniture factories, fruit canneries and driers, flour mills, meat packing plants and other of the leading industries of the state. These he will visit for special instruction in order that he may be prepared to call the attention of the importers and business men of the South American states to our trade possibilities. He also will be instructed by the School of Commerce to study the products of the South American state to which he goes, especially those that may be imported into the State of Oregon and the Northwest generally; and also to familiarize himself with the banking methods and houses and business concerns with whom business is likely to be developed. In other words, he becomes the Commercial Agent of the School of Commerce to develop and improve our commercial relations, as well as to give instruction in the English language.

It is too early to make any statement as to how soon this plan will be put into actual operation, but it will not be delayed any longer than is requisite to make the necessary arrangements and put them in practice.

The faculty colloquium will meet Tuesday September 21 at 7:30 p. m. for an address by Dr. Capen, specialist in the United States Department of Education.

EMERALD TRYOUTS

All students wishing to try out for the editorial staff of The Emerald should report to the City Editor, Harry Kuck, at once. For the present only the departmental heads have been chosen, and there is a chance for every Freshman to make a place.

No new reporter will be named for the staff until he has shown his fitness for one month.

Any staff member who neglects his duties without a good excuse will be dropped immediately. The same rule applies to reporters on trial; any candidate who does not bring in his story or furnish a satisfactory reason for not doing so will be given no more assignments.

Get your story in on time or tell us why. Write on one side of the sheet and across the long side of the page. Use a type-writer if possible. And get your story in on time not later than 5 o'clock on the evening before publication.

If you have signed up with the City Editor your assignment will appear on the board in the Journalism class room by 8 o'clock on the morning of the day before publication.

Commerce School Director Will Prepare Paper to Be Read at Washington, D. C.

H. B. Miller, director of the School of Commerce of the University of Oregon, has been specially requested by the Pan-American Union to prepare a paper for the Second Pan-American Congress, which meets in Washington, D. C., next December, under the auspices of the United States government.

Director Miller is asked to give a comprehensive description of the School of Commerce of Oregon, its organization, functions, field and scope of activity and plans and accomplishments, showing what such a school means and may mean to a community as well as to a university.

In accepting the invitation, Mr. Miller expresses himself as feeling that it offers an opportunity to show the country at large the rank that Oregon is taking and intends to take in both the educational and commercial fields.

SOCCER LOOKS GOOD FOR COMING SEASON

Three of Last Year's Squad, Including Ex-Captain Neal Ford Are Absent.

With all but three members of last year's team back, and 17 or 18 members of last year's squad of 25 registered again in the University, the soccer outlook for this year appears favorable.

The opening of the season has been postponed from September 15, when it opened last year, to October 1. A number of the gym classes are expected to start playing soccer the first of next week, thereby, giving men unfamiliar with the game an opportunity to try themselves out. A meeting will be held a few weeks after practice starts. A captain will be chosen at this time.

Ex-Captain Neal Ford has entered Stanford this fall and his loss will be felt, but with the appearance of a number of good players from the several Portland teams, a stronger team than last year is expected. Ford will turn out for soccer at Stanford.

No games have been scheduled as yet but the Multnomah eleven, which team played Oregon to a tie last year, has asked for a game again this year. It is also hoped that a game will be scheduled with O. A. C. this year as well as with Columbia University and other of the Portland teams.

President Campbell's class in Practical Ethics will meet for the present in the assembly room of Villard Hall.

Miss Cummings' course in Physical Training No. 7, Personal Hygiene, will recite in two sections, one section to meet Tuesday at 3 p. m. in the recitation room of the Extension Building, the other to meet Thursday at 11 sharp in the assembly room of Villard Hall.
