

PORTLAND CARPENTERS WANT INSTRUCTION

55 Members of Union Petition School of Architecture for Course in Building.

The extension department of the school of architecture of the University is to establish next Friday its first course in outside work, the result of a petition from the Carpenters' Union of Portland for instruction in structural building. The petition presented to the school asks for work to be given in Portland in order that the carpenters may become able to take up individual contracting.

Students Learn Simple Rudiments

At a meeting last Friday in the Benson Polytechnic school it was decided that the courses should take up the two subjects: Graphic statics and quantitative estimating. These two will give the men an opportunity to learn the simple rudiments of construction of small buildings and an insight into the estimations of their costs. "It will give the artisans an opportunity to get hold of a line of work that they have not before been able to obtain and will, as a result, make them able to compete with some of the larger contractors on a small scale. They had not been able to get any line of work that will equip them for bettering their conditions until they conceived the idea of petitioning the University," said Professor Percy P. Adams yesterday. Professor Adams will do most of the lecturing in the new course. He is assistant professor in the school of architecture.

Mr. Lawrence Will Supplement

Mr. E. F. Lawrence, who is in charge of the work, will supplement in the lectures. Mr. Lawrence has for some time been considering the establishment of an extension course in the school of architecture, but it was not until this petition came before him that the course was decided upon.

"The men enrolled are eager to learn and if it were not for their lack of knowledge in mathematics it would be a comparatively easy thing to teach them architecture. But with their lack of mathematics, we can give them only the most simple of courses and these can as a result only take up the smaller buildings and structures," says Prof. Adams.

"In designing large buildings one must know how to join together the timbers that go to make up the building. These men, knowing as little as they do about mathematics, will be at a disadvantage and can not do the big things that the college graduate is able to undertake. They can, however, after completing the course that we propose to give them, take up the smaller jobs of construction and make a success of them. Such things as small buildings and residences will become familiar to them through the course and will enable them to go ahead by themselves and contract and build, thus making more money for themselves than they have been able to do before.

55 Union Men Petition

"There were 55 of the men who signed the petition to take the work," continued Prof. Adams, "and at a meeting next Friday evening the time will be decided upon in which they will meet. In all probability, the classes will meet every two weeks, but it is barely possible that they will meet every week. In either case lectures will be arranged for each meeting. It will not change my schedule so very much and will not necessitate the changing of any classes, as I have every Friday afternoon clear."

Mr. Lawrence who is at the head of the school of architecture is a member of the Architectural club of Portland. The club disbanded recently because of the period of depression which has been sweeping the state, but under the lead of Mr. Lawrence has again been brought to life and is now working in Portland.

Another Course Arranged

A new course has been arranged with this club by which they will be able to get an extension in descriptive geometry, which, according to Prof. Adams is essential in architectural drafting. The club will meet every Saturday afternoon.

The new course in this line of work is all made out and is ready to be taken up by Professor Lawrence at any time. Professor Adams will lecture, also, at this meeting.

The Carpenters' union is headed by B. W. Sleeman who has charge also, of the work that is to be carried on in Portland. He will act as chairman of the meetings.

ERROR ANNOUNCED

Dr. E. S. Bates desires to announce an error appearing in the scenario, of the Oregon Pageant in which it was stated that the counties of the state would be represented. Due to error in copy the number of counties was specified as 84, but should have been 35.
(Published by Request.)

There is an army of 21,102,118 Americans at present engaged in actual student life in the United States. No other single country in the world can equal this record.

The second semester at the University of Washington opens Feb. 2.

PRESS NOTES

"The Bird of Paradise."

Miss Carlotta Monterey, who will play the part of Leana, in "The Bird of Paradise" at the Eugene theatre Thursday, January 20, does not claim to have any distinctive fads except that she is one of the few leading women on the stage who has never appeared in moving pictures and she very distinctly states that she never will.

She has spent most of her time abroad and was educated for the stage over there.

She studied the drama at the Academy of Dramatic Art in London, England, and took first prize when she graduated.

She also studied vocal music under Madame Yeatman in Paris and was a pupil of Monsieur Raymond, of the Grand Opera, Paris, in ballet dancing.

She made her first appearance on any stage, at Daly's theatre, London, in the revival of "The Geisha," with May De Sousa in the leading role. Last season she was brought over by Lou Tellegen, the famous French actor, and appeared with him, in "Taking Chances" at the Thirty-ninth street theatre, New York, last winter. She loves sculpture, music, and is very fond of foreign literature, especially the works of Russian and Danish authors.

The young lady is a native of Oakland, California, and her mother was known as one of the handsomest women in Paris, France, a town that can boast of many pretty women. Miss Monterey is modest in saying that "she looks something like her mother."

men of the present time and their problems.

Along the same line is the suggestion that a system of exchanging professors between the universities of the United States and the various South American colleges, which would be the ideal training for students preparing to enter the export trade in this country or in foreign countries. It was also intimated that such a system could also include the exchange of students from one school of commerce in the United States to another.

Meets Former Oregonians.

President Campbell's trip was one of pleasure, chiefly on account of meeting so many former Oregon students, who are attending eastern schools. In New York, the ex-Oregon men gave a banquet in his behalf.

Conditions Are Booming.

"Conditions are good in the east," said the president. "The chief trouble is that many concerns are finding it hard to get skilled labor, which is being absorbed in the ammunition plants. Preparedness Favored, But Not Drill. "One matter which was of interest was the consensus of opinion on things military in the colleges. Preparedness was urged for the colleges, but not compulsory drill. The opinion is general and well-based that a few weeks of drill is sufficient, but that the important item of preparedness is development of engineering and military tactics. Harvard has established an elective course in tactics. Physical fitness is important and that is provided by efficient physical training departments.

At Columbia University, President Campbell got into touch with several instructors looking forward to adding new faculty members to the commercial and sociological departments.
