Green Lid Frosh Real Vaudeville, Miss Domepieces Say '17 Joymakers

One Frosh Declares He Will Be Like a Nut Minus Shell After the Cremation.

"When my green cap is gone I'll feel like a nut without a shell," ruefully remarked one freshman as he considered the grand cremation to take place Friday. He is not the only one who will miss the verdant dome piece. George Cook says he finds a cap much handier to carry around with him in preference to a new lid of not as insignificant size.

Earl Murphy is almost afraid to buy a new one for fear he will leave it under a seat in the Eugene theatre next Friday. He is so used to finding it in his pocket that he will just naturally have to learn the habit of putting it elsewhere all over again.

Somewhat of this feeling is bothering Nellis Hamblin. "My joy at being freed from the green thing is so great that I can't express it but, you know," he said, "there's one drawback. I'll have a hard time tipping another properly."

The treasurer of the freshman class has learned to count his dollars since the difficult task of keeping track of the twenty-five cent pieces in the class treasury has developed upon him. He was considering the purchase of a new "lid" until he happened to think that the sudden demand for proper head covering would make the price go up. Now he is in doubt about just what course to pursue.

Harold Say fears he is going to feel peculiar for a few days. "I'll miss the gentle trickle down the back of my neck during the rainy season," he says.

Another member of the class of 1919 says he is afraid he and some of his mates are going to look like accidents just going to happen. He suggests that they wear muzzles so they won't get lost on the campus without anything to identify them. Still another says after Friday he will be in the seventh heaven.

40 MEN WORK ON DIAMOND

Improvements Only Preliminary Says Mr. Tiffany.

Special work was done on the baseball diamond during cleanup morning, a squad of 40 men being detailed to work on it. The improvements made were only preliminary however. Early next week it is to be ploughed, scrapped and leveled. "We want to get it into good shape before next season," said Mr. Tiffany. "We have a natural diamond there but it doesn't drain well enough yet. We are going to round the center and provide a suitable slope. It lacks one now. Our outfield is too rough, at present too, and we are going to level it. We have the makings of one of the best baseball diamonds in the northwest there. New bleachers along the track fence will also go up. Our present seating capacity is only 1200. We will swell that to 1700 or 1800 by next season."

Steps were cut up the bank from Alder street Friday morning by the work squad and they will be boarded up and made permanent when the bleachers are erected.

The only objection to the diamond as it now stands is that the sun is rather hard on the fielders' eyes. It faces the northwest and should face the southeast. Manager Tiffany says this condition will probably be changed by next season.

GLEE CLUB TRIP NETS $100 The recent glee club trip will net approximately $100 for the woman's building fund, according to Manager Leslie Tooze.

He believes that the success of the trip was due largely to the ticket sales held by high school students in the various towns.

"Newspapers everywhere were complimentary," Tooze concluded. "I believe that the girls going into the homes was a benefit. Every report said that the University had been helped greatly, through its students becoming known more thoroughly."

Junior Class Hour on May 20 Won't Be "Local Color Stuff" or "A la Freshman."

WHO—Junior class. WHERE—Guild hall WHEN—May 20, 4 to 6 p. m. WHAT—A genuine vaudeville performance.

There you have the list of it, but there are a few other details that might interest you. Echo Zahl, chairman of the junior class hour committee says, "The performance will be strictly professional. There will be no 'local color stuff, for once, the faculty will escape.'"

All of the plans of the production have not been made public as yet, but a few of the features are already known. Rosalind Bates, Robert McMurray and Alex Bowen will 'perpetrate' "A Full House," a one act skit by James Mott, who directed "The Fortune Hunter" and "Arizona." The skit was produced professionally with great success.

Margaret Spangler has been secured to sing semi-classical songs. She will be supported in the chorus work by a pony ballet.

There is to be a Hawaiian stunt, too, with ukuleles, but the management wishes it to be distinctly understood that the act will not be pulled off 'a la Freshman.' Martha Beer is to appear in an original Hawaiian interpretive dance called "Lalee." She asserts that every effort will be made to "get over" the genuine Hooloo atmosphere.

Then, last but not least, Howard McCulloch and Echo Zahl are booked to give 15 minutes of song, dance and patter.

The admittance to this performance by the above mentioned artists is free—to those who are invited. Come early and avoid the rush, the management suggests.

The freshmen are to be hostesses to the junior women at a picnic lunch the evening of Women's Day at Syracuse University. Each freshman will prepare a lunch for two, and take with her a junior woman.

Ruby Hammerstrom, '13, who is teaching at Franklin high school, Portland, is a guest of the Gamma Phi Beta fraternity this week-end.
