Leland Hendricks was a man. In the University he established a precedent for work and ability that he maintained when out. True to this precedent, he climbed rapidly into the high lights of journalism and at the time of his untimely death was managing editor of the Oregon Daily Statesman, of Salem.

Leland Hendricks was honest. In his capacity of moulding opinion when editor of the Oregon Emerald in 1914-15 he secured the confidence of all. He played no one false. He made sure of his ground before he tread. But having made sure he did not hesitate.

Leland Hendricks was a mutual friend.

It was in the capacity of editor of the Emerald that he once wrote an editorial under the caption "Do You Know Him?" He wrote that because he was a mutual friend. It was about the chap in school who was a "nobody" in the light of "Who's Who." It was about the chap who works and works hard, never complaining, always aspiring, cheerful and sunny, and yet whose merits go unrewarded.

We bow our heads in reverent memory to Leland G. Hendricks.

With a course as clearly defined as a meteor flashing across the sky, the Emerald embarks with this issue upon its mission to the student body of the University of Oregon, to the faculty, to the alumni and to the friends.

We know what is expected of us. Each one expects something just a little different. We shall boil these individual opinions down, simmer a bit more, add what we expect and then if the staff does not prove too balky give what we shall credit to the best of our ability.

Not only as a disseminator of news but as a forum of opinion is the Emerald published—a needed organ. The staff will furnish the news. But columns will be kept open for the opinions of all. Criticism, if not vindictive, is essential to well-being. All letters are welcome—if signed. The writer's name need not be published but it must be known to the editor.

Editorially the Emerald—will remain to be seen. Talk is cheap.

Freshmen you have the biggest class in the history of the university. That's not saying you have the most class, for that remains to be seen. Hide not your light under a bushel lest your good works go unrecommended to your sophomore, junior and senior years.

You are welcome!
You will be welcomed some more. But that is to teach you loyalty and Oregon spirit.

You will find friends at Oregon—lots of 'em.

You will find work to do—lots of it.

And above all you have responsibility. Responsibility that fundamentally, that right at the very beginning means a name for this university you have chosen to be your alma mater. For just as you treat your own standing in this university and just as you conduct yourself through the four years you are to be here so will the standing of the university be. But don't be burdened by this

AS REGARDS THE EMERALD

The staff of the Emerald is not limited to numbers. But it is limited to ability. To anyone who has journalistic ambitions and wishes to become associated with Emerald work see either the editor, managing editor or the city editor.

To the new members of the staff a few suggestions:

- 1.—By all means typewrite your copy.
- 2.—Write on one side of a sheet only.
- 3.—Hand your copy in EARLY. There is a box in the Emerald room in the basement of McClure hall.
- 4.—Cover your news thoroughly. If your "nose" is good you will scent more than you go after. If you do not have time to cover this yourself tell the City Editor about it—phone 660.

thought. Now get it out of your system and show a little "pep."

There are activities for you to get into. That means you have got to work up.

Be a servant—not a slave—today, and a trained master tomorrow. The trained masters are in the junior and senior classes. But don't wait until you are a junior or senior before you try to be a master. It can't be done.

All right freshmen a good mitt shake—and lots of luck.

DR. AYER PUBLISHES BOOK

"The Psychology of Drawing" Deals With Subject of Children's Drawings.

Dr. F. C. Ayer, of the educational department, has recently published a book "The Psychology of Drawing," dealing with the subject of children's drawings.

The theme of the book is that analytical drawing is the end to be sought in all scientific studies. Dr. Ayre advances the idea that ability to draw well, in the sense of making attractive sketches, is in no way correlated with the ability to understand and describe the object studied, and therefore is no guaranty of clear recognition of objects. According to Dr. Ayer, a pupil may make a sketch which, from the artist's point of view is rough and irregular, but which, in that it exhibits the relations truly and shows an insight into the characteristics of the objects pictured, will be of more value to him as a student of science than anything which may accompany the production of an attractive looking sketch.

GIRLS GET NEW GYM

Is Constructed Outdoors on Swedish Plan.

Increased Facilities Are Afforded in Many Branches of Women's Sports.

Facilities for girls' sports and for interesting work in the gymnasium department are greater this year than ever before, according to Mable J. Cummings, director of women's gymnasium. The new out-door girls' gymnasium, constructed on the plan of the Swedish gymnasium, affords opportunity for accommodating just twice the number of classes as previously by the simultaneous use of both the indoor and out-door gymnasium.

The work in the out-door gymnasium offers an opportunity for recreation during the winter in the nature of inter-class games of basketball, in-door baseball and tennis. The work there will alternate with the less interesting calisthenics of the in-door gymnasium department.

Hockey practice begins Monday in real earnest preparatory to the semi-annual combat with the O. A. C. girls hockey team which is scheduled to meet Oregon on her own territory some time in the early fall.

Archery and golf are two sports which are growing more popular with the girls. Archery practice on the campus archery range this year will start with fresh apparatus in the shape of new yew wood bows and with accommodations for double the number of girls. The permanent golf course is as yet unsettled but there have been more applicants for enrollment in golf than ever before and some arrangement will soon be made for the satisfaction of the ever-increasing demand, declared Miss Cummings.

PETITIONS FOR SPORT

Basketball Request of Students Goes to Faculty Wednesday

Passing of Ruling Will Again Put Oregon in the Running With O. A. C.

The petition for the reinstatement of inter-college basket-ball is to be presented to the faculty the latter part of next week, according to Nick Jaureguy, president of the student body. "I think that the faculty will have passed the petition and that basket-ball will be re-established by the first of next month."

A petition was made up last year and presented to the student body request-collegiate basketball. A set of resolutions were drawn up and voted on by the student body for its reinstatement. They were passed with a vote of 500 to 18.

The passing of the ruling will again put us in the running with O. A. C. and the games will be resumed in the gymnasium.

Enthusiasts claim that the keeping quiet of the game last year, will make bigger and more enthusiastic crowds of rooters than has ever before turned out.

Numbers of University women are keenly interested in swimming and although there is yet properly no women's tank still two days a week, Tuesday and Thursday, have been allotted to the women for the exclusive use of the tank in the men's gymnasium.

Miss Cummings says a very lively

FRESHMEN GIRLS TO HAVE BIG SISTERS

Woman's League and Y. W. C. A. Have Again Started Sponsor System.

Each Upper Class Girl Will Have Charge to Aid and Advise.

That freshmen girls need no longer feel lonesome, or friendless, or lack for good advice and information, is the determination of the Woman's League and the Y. M. C. A. These organizations have put their heads together and have provided a sponsor from one of the upper classes for every freshman girl on the campus. It will be the pleasure of this sponsor to immediately make a friend of her freshman and to see that she becomes acquainted with other students, has no chance to get lonesome and has opportunity to attend all college functions.

Cards have been sent to each freshman welcoming her to the campus and naming her sponsor. Ruth Westfall is the chairman of the committee which will notify the upper class girls as to the identity of their "sponsees."

The sponsors are urged to call upon their proteges as soon as possible and interest has thus far been taken by both old and new women students in all phases of the gymnasium work and girl sports are demanding greater recognition every day.

be ready to help with suggestions about schedules and work, to interest them in student activities as, Y. W. C. A., Woman's League, and Thiple A, and to see that they attend all games and student functions. In short it is to see that the first year at Oregon is both pleasant and profitable.

The sponsor system has been in Oregon for at least four years. It originated in England and is widely used in boarding schools through the United States as the Big Sister movement. The University of Wisconsin has successfully used the sponsor system for a number of years.
