Students Brave Rain To Watch Unveiling Of Store Windows; Univ. Band Plays

(By Adelaide Lake)

"Hello, Lane," was temporarily transferred from the University campus to Willamette street last night when house meetings were suspended and students attended the unveiling of store windows decorated by the Eugene merchants for Dress-up Week. In spite of rain and the almost utter impossibility of carrying an umbrella in the crowd, interest and loyalty were manifested by the University students and townspeople who made their appearance to admire the efforts of their merchants.

Displays showed that much care had been used by all window trimmers to give the most beautiful effect as well as to exhibit the stock of the store. In two stores live models were shown; in one to display suits, coats and dresses and in the other to display hats. In one jewelry store a doll wedding was staged where all characters wore diamonds. One candy store showed candy pulling in process and another made only small transparent spaces in a frosted glass and the peepholes were labeled "For Men Only". Candies were shown inside.

Wade Brothers' clothing store, which received the prize for the best window display, presented its suits in the form of an art exhibit. Each suit was framed. Flowers gave the window a dainty appearance.

Hampton's store, which received the prize for the best front, had decorated all of its windows, those on Sixth avenue as well as those on Willamette street. Different color schemes were used in each window to show off the goods to the best advantage.

Simplicity and beauty should be called the prevailing effect of the majority of displays.

The University band, as well as the city band, played on the street corners both before and after the unveiling of the windows.

ADMIRAL CRICHTON ASSURED FOR FRIDAY

Faculty and Townspeople Guarantee Royalty at Personal Risk.

Rehearsals Continue; Committees of Students Handle Staging as Part of Class Work.

"The Admirable Crichton", J. M. Barrie's drama of English society, will be staged Friday night, March 30, at a Guild hall by the students of the dramatic interpretation classes under the direction of Professor A. F. Reddie. Contrary to the previous notice that the production of the play had been abandoned because of the high royalty, the play will be given, but for one night only.

It is probable that all of the work of the classes in rehearsing for the play would have been in vain had it not been for the response which citizens of Eugene and members of the faculty gave when the announcement came that the production had been given up.

Individual members of the University faculty, members of the Drama guild and citizens of Eugene, guaranteed the entire amount of the royalty regardless of the profit that might be made from the seat sale and rehearsals have been continued with scarcely an interruption in the original plans.

One of the first to get into communication with Professor Reddie after the announcement was made through the Eugene papers last week that the play had been abandoned, was the Rev. William Moll Case, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of this city. Rev. Case asked permission to head the list of subscribers who would guarantee the entire amount of the royalty in order that the play should be produced here.

So interested was Rev. Mr. Case that he has announced a sermon for next Sunday evening, based upon the leading character of Crichton.

Many of the students who have won distinction in previous campus plays will be seen in the cast of Crichton Friday night. Among these are Ernest Watkins, Margaret Crosby, Alex Bowen, Roberta Killam, Kenneth Shetterly, Warren Edwards, Burt Thompson, Helen Burlington and Harold Hargreaves.

PREPPERS TO GET GLIMPSE OF OREGON

Stereopticon Lectures Ready for High School Students' Spring Vacation.

Pamphlets Portraying Campus Life Published by Advertising Committee.

In pursuance of the policy upon which it came into existence last year, the Greater Oregon Committee met last week and formulated extensive plans for making the University better known to high school students of the state. The ambition of the committee is to keep within Oregon universities and colleges, students who have the choice of attending schools outside.

This is to be done by giving every high school pupil in the principal cities of Oregon a glimpse of the University, not an actual view of the campus and its buildings, for that would be too expensive, but all that pictures, literature, and lecturers can portray.

Special emphasis will be placed upon a series of student lectures to be given during spring vacation. Four speakers will be sent out to cover the principal cities of the state, and each will be accompanied by a stereopticon outfit and operator. Machines, and slides showing the University campus, laboratories and class-rooms, and many phases of student life, have been contributed by the extension department for the enterprise.

Besides these specially delegated speakers, upper-classmen will be asked to go before high school audiences in their home towns during their spring vacation or week-end sojourns and talk on some phase of University life. It is thought that, in this way, nearly every high school student will be reached. The opinion of the Greater Oregon Committee is that little or nothing about the University is known to high school students in some parts of the state, except that there is such an institution located at Eugene.

The committee will include in its advertising plan the publication and distribution, to juniors and seniors in high schools, of pamphlets portraying life on the campus and all the information usually sought by one contemplating entering upon a college career. The advertising committee of the University will co-operate with the student organization in putting out literature.

Expenses of speakers and the publication of pamphlets will be met partly by some form of student entertainment and partly by the University advertising department.

The committee plans to begin work early next semester and launch a lecture campaign in the fall during the numerous holidays that cut up the first half of the school year. Christmas vacation will give speakers an opportunity to cover a wide range of territory.
