

WOMEN'S TRAINING FOR WAR IS RUSHED

Honor Guard Learn First Aid, Signal Practice and Mechanics.

Some Co-eds May Affiliate With Red Cross for Active Service.

Some 150 co-eds re wondering what opportunity they will have to prove the value of the National Honor Guard brand of knowledge.

For six weeks first aid work has been going on at the Chamber of Commerce every Tuesday evening; the novices have learned to apply ordinary bandages, have taken instruction in the value, uses and application of the tourniquet, and general first aid methods. Wednesday evenings the swimming classes meet in the Y. M. C. A. tank. Later the University tank will be called into use to offer sufficient accommodations.

Semaphore signalling, familiarly known as wig-wagging, occupied the Thursday night hour (and the crowd is so large that the armory floor is dotted solidly with white shirt and middie clad figures.

It is the opinion of the members that the first and second corps work will be of more practical use than that of the third corps. The two former comprises courses in hospital training, consisting of invalid cookery and similar instruction combined with the first-aid work, while the latter gives instruction in the driving and mechanism of machines, manipulation of sail-boats, swimming, riding, shooting and wig-wagging.

Bill Haywood is instructing the first-aid class with the assistance of local physicians and nurses, the city garages furnish automobile instruction.

SERMON ON MOUNT IS TOPIC

The Bible class met this morning at 7 o'clock with Miss Watson as leader. The subject for this week's study was the Sermon on the Mount.

AMUSEMENTS

In the role of the "Poor Little Rich Girl," Mary Pickford has been given the first real opportunity since she joined the Artcraft Pictures. The story is centered entirely about the little star, and it has a splendid fundamental idea for popular appeal—the young and the old, the rich and the poor, and the "high brow" as well as the ordinary chap will delight in this idyl of childhood.

Little Mary appears as a child of eleven, who must stay in her big house guarded by many servants and teachers, forsaken by her mother who is busy with society, and by a father absorbed in his business. The pathetic contrast between this poor little rich girl and the happy poor children of the neighborhood provides the theme of the story.

The drama develops from a maid giving the little girl an overdose of a drug in order that she may go to the theatre, with the result that the poor little rich girl has a dream in which she sees all those about her as they really are. In her dream, she sees the governess as a serpent, the maid as a two-faced thing, her father a man chained to a money ma-

RESEARCH UNIT HERE

Will Co-operate on Problems of National Defense.

Twelve Faculty Members Interested Seek Aid of Board of Regents.

A local branch of the American Research council has been organized by University faculty members at the suggestion of the National council. It will act in co-operation with the National council for defense. O. F. Stafford, professor of chemistry, is chairman of the local committee.

"It has been found that scientific research has played a large part in the present European war", says Professor Stafford, "The feeling has been that the American nation must take advantage of its research facilities as well. Through the central council, research effort is co-ordinated. The problems concerning national defense are assigned to men most able to carry them through to successful completion."

These research councils are distributed throughout the United States in educational institutions, in research laboratories maintained by industrial concerns, and in some private organizations.

The council comprises these members of the faculty interested in scientific research: Professors A. R. Sweetser, J. F. Boyard, Charles H. Edmonson, W. P. Boynton, A. E. Caswell, E. H. McAlister, E. S. Conklin, R. H. Wheeler, F. L. Shinn, W. D. Smith, E. L. Packard, and O. F. Stafford. President P. L. Campbell is an ex-officio member of the council. The co-operation of at least three members of the University board of regents is being sought, but the committee can not now announce the three who will be selected.

PROF. ALLEN STILL ABSENT

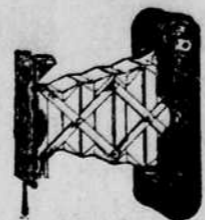

Journalism Dean Suffers Slight Relapse After Venturing Outside.

E. W. Allen, dean of journalism, who has been confined to his home for the past two weeks with a severe case of complicated la grippe, is improving slowly. However, he will not be able to meet his classes until after spring vacation. In the fore part of the week, Professor Allen ventured out to enjoy the spring weather and as a result is suffering a slight relapse.

"Aleta" Dainty and Talented Dance With Alexander At Eugene Theatre

Further enhancing the Alexander attraction at the Eugene theatre for three days beginning Thursday, April 12, is the oriental dances and song numbers offered by a bevy of oriental girls.

There have only been two, perhaps three, first class road shows of this kind ever offered at the leading theatres in the United States since exponents of the black art have attempted to introduce the magic of the ancient Hindu and Arab in this country.

The first of these great shows to win popular favor and fame in the United States was the great Hermann show, which played in the largest playhouses in this country. The only other attraction worthy of the name was the Thurston show. Both of these great artists have
