QUALIFICATIONS FOR OFFICE

To you students desiring student body offices and aspiring to handle the reigns of government, be pertinent with yourselves. Sit down in front of a good mirror—one that will tell the truth—look yourself squarely in the eye and see if you can answer these questions satisfactorily.

What is your scholarship record?
To those people who have attempted to carry a full college course and were unable to complete the work either to the satisfaction of themselves or their professors we would say those people should squelch their ambitious aspirations at once. The man or woman who cannot carry classroom responsibility is not fit to shoulder practical student body responsibilities.

What have you done for the student body or the University to deserve to hold a responsible office?
The students who shuffle through their freshman and sophomore years without participating in any student body activity or without associating themselves in any way with the working squads are drones. They are worse than drones—they are parasites. No junior or senior who has been a "do-nothing" in his freshman and sophomore years has a right to any vote save his own.

How democratic are you?
Oregon democracy demands that its leaders shall be those who are so imbued with the "Oregon Spirit" that they will maintain it unimpaired through their incumbency.

Are you broad-minded or are you ruled by prejudice?
How well do you know your fellow students or do you limit your friendship to a chosen few?
Are you a carping critic or are your ideas and plans, your thoughts and actions constructive?
How well are you acquainted with the requirements of the office you are after?
Do you think you are the person for the place or are you after a little glory and think you can get something for nothing?
Have you a reprehensible ulterior motive in seeking the office, or do you desire to do real service for the student body?

Changing the drill hour was not a pet plan of the Emerald's. The Emerald gave reasons for a suggested change last issue on the basis that a majority of the men drilling wanted a change. But if the reasons listed are not so strong as the reasons for not changing then we should say, as did we Thursday, the drill hour should not be changed. The Emerald's columns are open to any expression for or against a change.

Why not put the freshmen to work planting spuds?
Baseball has its fatalities. A co-ed sprained her ankle.
If the cost of living mounts any higher what say you to getting an aeroplane?
The spring rop of pins seems to be much smaller. Must be the high cost of living is saving sole leather.
The senior says the commencement is coming. But of what?

BOOST OREGON CROP

Cranberry Growers Discover Means of Keeping Fruit.

Competition With Eastern Markets Now Possible; Product Good.

The cranberry industry in Oregon has recently received a large boost by the solving of the problem of keeping the marsh fruit over long periods of time. Such is the content of a letter from William E. Schimpff of Astoria, a leading Clatsop county grower, to Allan C. Hopkins of the University School of Commerce. In substantiation of this claim Mr. Schimpff a few days ago sent Mr. Hopkins a box of cranberries he had grown at Astoria. The berries, although picked several months ago, were solid and in prime condition on reaching Eugene. Mr. Schimpff also enclosed a paper of cranberries which had wintered on the marsh where they grew. Although not picked until April, they managed to escape without the slightest damage from the frosts of the entire winter.

Clatsop county holds first place in cranberry production in the state of Oregon. More than 100 acres have been set out and improved, which last year yielded some 20,000 boxes. Predictions are for an even far better crop next year as the bulk of this acreage has not yet come into bearing, for only a small percentage of the vines are yet four years of age.

The possibility of the Oregon berry competing with the eastern berry principally of Cape Cod, has now become a certainty and Mr. Schimpff, who is a member of the legislature, is eager to impress on prospective growers and prospective buyers the fact that the Oregon berry compares most favorably, not only in size and flavor but in keeping quality, with the best product of the east.

The cranberry growers of Clatsop county lately have organized an association with J. S. Dellinger president and W. E. Schimpff secretary. This association, to which belong virtually all the cranberry producers of Clatsop county, has associated itself with the two associations in Pacific county, Wash., just across the Columbia river, and the three have formed an exchange which will handle the marketing of the crop of their section. The bulk of the cranberry acreage in this whole Columbia river district is planted in late varieties, which keep much better than the early. The second year's crop picked from the late vines was found to keep much better than did the crop of the first year.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAM SET

Secretary Onthank to Establish Lists of Eligibles; Tests on May 16-17.

An announcement by the civil service commission of an examination May 16 and 17 has lately been received by secretary Onthank to establish lists of eligibles for the position of assistant classifier and junior classifier in the United States Geological Survey. A considerable number of appointments will probably be made from these lists to positions involved in the classification of public lands under the stock-raising homestead law and similar statutes. It is believed that many graduates of agricultural, engineering, and forestry colleges will be well qualified for this work and that the work will be attractive to them.

Requests for application blanks should be addressed to the Commission at Washington.

Competitors will be examined in the following subjects: surveying, elementary land classification, mathematics, thesis and training and experience.

Applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their thirty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination.
