SPECIALIST IN LIVESTOCK VISITS COMMERCE SCHOOL

R. A. Blanchard, of Portland, Tells of Conditions in Cattle and Sheep Industry.

R. A. Blanchard, agricultural agent for the Livestock State Bank in Portland, was in Eugene yesterday and visited the School of Commerce, where he obtained some of the latest information on livestock conditions in various parts of the world.

Mr. Blanchard has been co-operating with the School of Commerce in a survey of the world's livestock industry. These investigations have revealed that in spite of the war the number of hogs and sheep is not decreasing materially, but that the world's supply of cattle is diminishing. However, the reduction in cattle had begun before the war, he says.

The Livestock State Bank was organized a few months ago by the Swift interests, who also control the Union Meat company and the Union Stockyards in Portland. Mr. Blanchard is constantly engaged in gathering and disseminating information on the agricultural activities of the Northwest. The connections of the livestock industries in Portland now extend as far as Colorado and Wyoming.

Ross Williams, quarterback on the team this year was elected captain for the 1918 season by the lettermen of the University of Washington football team at the annual banquet last night.

This is Williams' first year on the team.

LIEUTENANT TUERCK VISITS

Ex-Oregon Athlete, Now Officer in Artillery, Returns to Campus.

William Tuerck, '17, now a second lieutenant in the U. S. regular army, arrived in Eugene yesterday, to spend a week or so before he is called out on active service. Tuerck gained his commission in the second officers' training camp, at the Presidio, and was made a second lieutenant in the artillery.

While in college, Tuerck was a member of the football, soccer and baseball teams. He won his "O" three years straight, as a Varsity pitcher.

He expects to be sent to Honolulu on January 5, to get further training before going to the front.

FIGHT OR WORK

Now, as never before in history, America is asking of her sons and daughters loyal, wholehearted and efficient service. Whether on the battlefield or in the activities behind the lines which supply the strength from which our armies draw, we must achieve the last ounce of results. The fighting machine must be a marvel of efficiency; the war and navy departments want college men for positions of leadership. Production of everything needed for both peace and war must be speeded up if this nation is to win its fight for democracy. Both peace and war work are crying out for trained efficiency.

THE UNIVERSITY PREPARES YOU FOR EITHER.

For the men, military drill and courses in military science are offered, under the direction of Col. W. H. C. Bowen, U. S. Army, retired. All the University science courses have been adapted as far as possible toward military ends. They are practical courses, meaning a lot of hard study, but they are well worth it. Promotion either in civil or military life falls most largely to the college-trained man. For the women, special attention is to be given next term to the Domestic Science courses. Other lines of work also are being strengthened, but special emphasis is now placed on preparation for efficient solution of home problems—and this, in the aggregate, means much to the nation.

NOW IS THE TIME TO GO TO COLLEGE.

National authorities and army officers, from President Wilson and Secretary Baker down, are united in urging young men to remain in college until the nation calls them individually to service. What they want is Trained Service, and not mere numbers of the unskilled. Students in technical courses are especially requested to follow this course. President Wilson says: "I would particularly urge upon the young people who are leaving our high schools that as many of them as can do so avail themselves this year of the opportunities offered by the colleges and technical schools, to the end that the country may not lack an adequate supply of trained men and women."

The University of Oregon is better equipped this year than ever before. Winter term opens January 2.
