SAYS WOMEN CAN HELP

Bulletin Article States Need in Many Fields.

Ships' Draftsmen, Inspectors,
Passenger and Freight Clerks Wanted.

Women can now help design ships for the United States Navy, announces an article on "New Positions for Women in the Government Service," in the February-March issue of the Vocational Guidance Bulletin, posted by Miss Margaret Upleger, reference librarian, on the students' bulletin board in the library. They are eligible for employment as ship draftsmen in the navy-yard service and mechanical, marine, engine, and boiler draftsmen in the navy department.

Another new woman's job, the article states, is that of inspector of undergarments in the quartermaster's department of the army. Other jobs for which women have become eligible since the war are passenger-rate clerk, freight-rate clerk, and express-rate clerk in the depot quartermaster's offices, war department; schedule clerk in the office of the chief of ordnance, war department; balance of store clerks in the office of the chief of ordnance, war department and ordnance department at large; index and catalogue clerk in the bureau of ordnance, war department; negative cutter in the geological survey; bookkeeper-typewriter and clerk-bookkeeper in the departmental service.

Applicants for positions other than the last two positions named, will be rated on such things as physical-ability, experience, education, and training. The United States civil service commission will receive applications for examinations at any time.

OFFICER DESCRIBES RAID ON TRENCHES

there were 12 bags in the Canadian front trenches to receive the effects of the prisoners for identification as soon as they were to be brought back.

The night of the raid was a dark, stormy one, and the Germans were not expecting any trouble, and were less prepared and watchful than usual. The raid worked just as it had been planned, the Canadians getting exactly 12 prisoners.

For nine months at one time, Major

Acland's battalion was continuously engaged in trench warfare with no direct attacks. "We learned trench-craft and trench warfare, learned how to save our men and still annoy the enemy as much as possible."

Major Acland left Canada with the first division in October, 1914. "About 5 to 10 per cent of the men had seen service before in South Africa," he said, "for men with previous service were encouraged to enlist. When we landed in England, no one was qualified as commander of the division, and officers were loaned from the regular British forces. They did brilliant work. The best thing they did for us was to improve the discipline. In every way, even in the matter of saluting, we improved the longer we remained in France."

"Sometimes exaggerated things are said about the improvement in morale," he continued, "especially about the change in religious feeling. In many ways there has been a decided increase in religious feeling, but not as strong as some people picture it."

Was at Ypres.

Major Acland's division went to the Ypres salient about the beginning of June, 1916, when the Germans landed a powerful attack on their front. The Canadians effected a successful counter-attack, retook all their trenches, and the Canadian forces were considerably united in feeling, for there were more Canadians together at Ypres than there had been at any place before in France.

Major Acland was also in the battle of the Somme. Here his company was in the front line at one time for only two days, and did not take part in an attack, and during that time lost 25 per cent of the company.

The speaker touched briefly on the German atrocities. "When we remember some of the atrocities the Germans have committed we see the need for absolute victory," he said.

Lieutenant Colonel John Leader introduced the speaker as "one of the most distinguished and gallant soldiers, where most men are gallant."

RUTH WESTFALL TO TEACH

Leaves for Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, to Accept High School Position.

Ruth Westfall, a senior in the University, and an honor student, left this (Saturday) noon for Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, where she has been given a high school position left vacant by the enlistment of the former teacher. Her work will be the teaching of mathematics, physics, and botany.

Miss Westfall applied for the position for next year, and received a telegram this morning telling her to come at once to finish out the last month of the year. This will also give her the opportunity to get the position for next year.

Frances Shoemaker, who graduated from the University last year, is teaching English in the same high school to which Miss Westfall is going. She says Coeur d'Alene is a place about the size of Eugene, and that the high school is a delightful place in which to teach.

Miss Westfall will return to the University as soon as her month is up, and will then finish her 11 hours and graduate in June with her class. The management of Red Cross, of which Miss Westfall is president, will be taken over by the cabinet remaining, and an election of new officers will be arranged for soon.

WOMEN HOLDING OPEN HOUSE

Ordnance Men Are Invited for Tonight; Informal Dancing to Follow.

Following up the tradition of the women's organizations on the campus in holding an informal reception for the men of the University at the beginning of a new term, the different women's groups are holding open house from 7 until 9 o'clock this evening. Members of the ordnance class are to be included among the guests.

Some of the houses will follow the reception with informal dancing.

This is the third open house that has been held during the year.

ARCHITECTS TO OFFER PRIZE

University Student Showing Most Improvement to Win Reward.

A first prize of $15, and a second prize of $10 will be offered this term by the Oregon chapter of the American Institute of Architects, to the student in the University school of architecture who shows the most consistent improvement in his work. This prize is being offered through Morris H. Whitehouse, of Portland, chairman of the educational committee of the institute.

Horace Foulkes Gets First Mention in American Architect.

The April number of the American Architect announces the award of first mention given to Horace Foulkes, a sophomore in the University school of architecture. His work was submitted to the Beaux Arts Institute of Design in March and received highest honors out of 79 designs. This is the first time that such an honor has been received by an Oregon student.

Six Oregon men received honorable mention at the same time. They are Hollis Johnston, Orin Jenkins, Lorin Ellis, Hugh Thompson, Joe Trowbridge, and Irving Smith.
