

MEN TO WORSHIP

Home Guard and Ordnance Men to Join Students.

Divine Services Will Be Held at Methodist Church Under U. Chaplain.

Sunday, April 14, is the day set aside for the meeting of the University battalion, the local home guard and the University ordnance corps. The service will be held at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the Methodist Episcopal church.

It is planned that the battalion and other groups shall attend in a body, and sections will be reserved for seating them. The entire service, which will be conducted by Dr. G. H. Parkinson, pastor of the church and chaplain of the University battalion, will be patriotic in nature. A feature will be the special musical program, with John Stark Evans at the pipe organ. Dr. Dunham, chaplain of the Home Guard company, will assist Dr. Parkinson in the services. Dr. Parkinson's theme will be, "Nothing Counts Except Sincerity and Honor."

Battalion staff officers will attend in uniform, and the entire service will be made as military as possible. The student body will be welcomed at this, a service dedicated to its battalion.

Dean Sarah Louise Arnold, of Simmons College, will lecture to University women tomorrow at 1 p. m. in Vliard hall on the work of the food administrators.

Dean Arnold, who is in the West as a personal representative of Mr. Hoover, makes this side trip from the conference of domestic science teachers held in Spokane to inspect the department of Home Arts and to spread further the gospel of conservation in its most extreme forms.

Head of a college devoted extensively to training women as efficient home-keepers and business partners, she is on the inside of the inner circle of food secrets, and has a deeply important message for University women.

All one o'clock classes have been cancelled to enable everyone to hear this speaker.

BATTALION FAILS TO TAKE ENEMY ARTILLERY AND GUNS

Students Could Have Been Killed Several Times Over in Tuesday's Tactics, According to Colonel Leader. Problem Not Effectively Worked Out.

The University battalion devoted the two-hour period Tuesday from one to three to the problem of advancing south on the general line of University street in an effort to determine the force and rout an enemy located with three machine guns and a battery of artillery near the Masonic cemetery.

How well they succeeded is told in the following story by Lieutenant Colonel John Leader, which is the only comment the Colonel made on the general effectiveness of the battalion's advance. The Colonel says that when he is betting on a horse in a race, and his horse comes in third or fourth, he feels very badly. "But when my horse comes in last of all," he said, "I don't mind, because I know that it is too bad to be true."

The battalion was to be arranged as the advance guard of a division. They were to discover the force of the enemy as far as possible, capture the machine guns, make an orderly advance and charge the enemy, when it seemed best. The skeleton enemy against which the battalion advanced had artillery in the rear, represented by a bass drum, which kept booming away after the start of the battle. Three snare drums in front of the enemy's position formed the machine guns. A small force of infantrymen with blue flags and hatbands and a force of cavalry with yellow flags and hatbands represented the force of the skeleton enemy.

The battalion failed to effectively capture the enemy's guns or to dislodge them from their position, think the umpires. In fact, from the position the battalion took, they all might easily have been killed several times over, for they exposed themselves on the ridges, making the best possible targets for the enemy fire.

SCURPTOR VISITS HERE

Phimister Proctor Carving Statue for Campus.

Has Work Nearly Ready for Cast; Spends Day in Search of Site.

Honoring Phimister Proctor, famous sculptor, and Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Teal, of Portland, Professor and Mrs. Alfred H. Schreff entertained with an informal reception Wednesday night in the studio of the architecture building. Mrs. G. T. Gerlinger, regent of the University, was a guest of the evening.

Mr. Proctor is making the "Pioneer" statue which will be presented to the University by Mr. Teal. "I will have the statue ready to cast," said Mr. Proctor, "within a month. With transportation as it is, I do not know how long it will be before the statue can be set up here." Mr. Proctor spent the day on the campus in search of a site for his work.

"The Oregon campus," he said, "is a delightful place and I am glad to place my work in such a lovely setting."

Mr. Proctor's works are in some of the most prominent buildings in the country. His "Buccaneer," done in Pendleton, Oregon, is well known to Oregonians.

A short musical program was a feature of the reception Wednesday night. Mrs. Minnie Klump Johnston sang several songs, Miss Winifred Forbes played two violin numbers and Mr. Faguy-Cote sang three solos. Mrs. A. C. Dixon and Mrs. Gerlinger poured coffee and Donna Spencer and Elsie Fitzmaurice served. Mr. Proctor left this evening for California.

HOOVER REPRESENTATIVE WILL SPEAK HERE FRIDAY

Dean Arnold of Simmons College to Present Food Administration Work to Women.

Sarah Louise Arnold, dean of women of Simmons College, will come to the University campus on Friday, April 12 to speak to the women of the University on food administration work.

As dean of Simmons College, an institution given over almost exclusively to domestic science and the various branches of home arts, Miss Arnold holds a position of importance and responsibility. She is at present in Spokane, having gone there to attend the general conference of teachers of domestic science, where she is acting as the personal representative of Mr. Hoover.

Dean Arnold is combining with this business flying trips to various colleges on the coast, and the University of Oregon is to be one of her stopping places.

The lecture has been scheduled for 1 o'clock, owing to the impossibility of getting any other hour which is not badly complicated with regular classes; all 1 o'clocks for women students will therefore be dismissed.

Miss Lillian Tingle, who has been attending the same conference, is expected to return to the campus this week.
