

GIRLS TO COMPETE FOR HAYWARD CUP

Senior Team to Defend Trophy Third Time for Permanent Ownership.

Basketball practice to train class teams for the women's interclass games began in the woman's gymnasium Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The plan of practices, according to Grace Rugg, head of basketball, as worked out at present is the following: Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 5 o'clock, freshmen; Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock sophomores, juniors and seniors. One additional day for practice may be arranged for later, says Miss Rugg.

Miss Grace Goran, who takes the place of Miss Hazel Rader on the faculty of the physical education department, is coaching the teams and hopes to have them ready for official interclass games soon. The promptness with which the games can be played off will depend largely upon the way the girls turn out for practice, say those in charge.

The Hayward cup, offered by Bill Hayward, is the trophy awarded the winning class team. The rule is that the class keeping the cup for three years in succession becomes permanent possessor of the trophy. The present senior class won the cup in its sophomore and its junior year, and it is said, is plotting to carry off permanent honors this year. A University team will be chosen after interclass games are played off, and it is hoped that at least one intercollegiate game may be scheduled.

OREGON OVERSEAS, NEW PUBLICATION OUT

Editing Class Prepares Special Bulletin for University Men in Service.

A publication printed by the editing class especially for the Oregon men in service and called "Oregon Overseas" is just off the University press. The pamphlet contains news notes gathered from the letters of the soldiers themselves, telling what they are doing and how they like soldiering.

One appeal of the publication is to impress upon the soldiers that Oregon has not forgotten them and letters from the men over there are always gladly received.

The bulletin contains an article on the campus changes since the boys left and another article on faculty changes, so that when the men come back they will be able to recognize the old school.

An article on the gold stars in the service flag tells of the men who have given their lives while in the service. The front page has a cut of Lieutenant Leslie Tooze who was killed in action September 28.

The column of marriages among college folk tells the men over seas what is doing in the matrimonial line, and also what they may expect, for, added to the column is a list of authorized engagements.

Addresses of every University of Oregon man in the service are listed alphabetically with captions such as "Write to the boys." "Here are the addresses, write."

Every man or woman who ever attended the University and who is now in the service of their country, will have one of these pamphlets mailed to them, if the University has been able to secure the address. There are about 700 on the mailing list.

The Bulletin shows that a large amount of hard work and time has been spent in getting out this special issue and Miss Adelaide Lake, editor, with her associates can justly feel that they have rendered the men of the University a real service. The other members of Miss Lake's staff are Elizabeth Aumiller, Helen McDonald, Peggy Phillips, Frances Blurock, Bess Colman and Erma Zimmerman.

Two thousand "Oregon Overseas", the special bulletins issued by the editing class in the school of journalism, were run off the press yesterday and are being mailed to all the men in the service whose addresses are known at the University.

This bulletin is the first of its kind published at the University, for there has never been a demand for such a publication in former years. Last year a request came from the men themselves, to send them the addresses of the other enlisted men. These were published and sent in sheet form, but this year, besides the request for addresses came the request for news of the University and of the men now enlisted.

Dean Eric W. Allen, head of the school of journalism, realized how such a bulletin would be appreciated by the boys in the service and immediately put his class of seven upperclass girls to work. This was about three weeks ago. At that time they planned on having perhaps a paper consisting of four pages. But when material actually began to come in, it outgrew the four pages and when it was finally made up, made a 14-page paper, 12x9 inches.

530 Addresses in List.

The paper contains 530 addresses of old Oregon students now in the service. This does not nearly cover all of the University men who are in the service but it is all that the class were able to gather in the two weeks. Another bulletin of this kind will probably be published this term, and it is hoped that for the next issue all of the students on the campus will unite in handing in addresses and letters from the men overseas or in the service here in the United States.

Besides the addresses, are stories of the changes on the campus, stories of each branch of the service, a list of marriages and engagements, and other odd bits of news or gossip.

Publication Pleases Faculty.

Faculty of the school of journalism are especially pleased over the bulletin. Professor Allen so much so, that he could not wait for it to come off the press, but took the proof home with him. A copy will be placed on the library bulletin board where all the students may see it.

The bulletins will be sent to the newspapers, alumni, representatives and senators, just as the regular News Bulletins are mailed throughout the state.

The staff which made this bulletin possible are Adelaide Lake, editor; Alene Phillips, business manager; Dean Eric W. Allen, adviser; reporters and all-around helpers, Erma Zimmerman, Frances Blurock, Bess Colman, Elizabeth Aumiller and Helen McDonald.

Helen Johns, of Pendleton, and Helen Currey, of La Grande, have returned from Washington, D. C., where they were doing government work. Miss Currey and Miss Johns were members of the class of '17 and taught in the La Grande high school last year. Both were members of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Miss Currey was called home to assist her sister-in-law on the Malheur County Enterprise during the absence of her brother, George Huntington Currey, who took the second O. T. C. at the University and was later called to Camp Pike, Arkansas. Miss Currey studied journalism while at the University.

GIRLS SERVE LUNCHEON

Food Preparation Class Cooks Meal for Those Taking Course.

Members of the one o'clock class in food preparation were entertained Thursday noon at luncheon by Erma Jefferson, Mrs. Helen Campbell and Myrtle Ross. The table was set in the laboratory of the household arts department.

Three courses were served by the girls. It is the first of a series of practice luncheons which forms a part of the course.

PORTLAND TO HAVE MILITARY COURSES

Colonel Leader Plans Work for Civilians and High School Students.

Military extension work for civilians and the plans for the instituting of military training in the Portland high schools were started by Colonel John Leader while in Portland the last two days. He returned to the campus on Saturday morning.

The military extension work was started on Friday, and everyone was enthusiastic over the courses. The training in the high schools will probably not be started for a month, or at least until the influenza bans are lifted, but the plans are pretty well perfected. Colonel Leader met the principals of the five high schools in Portland and found them enthusiastic and anxious to commence the training. The government is planning to institute this training in the high schools over the country but the school board in Portland was not willing to wait that long so is taking the matter over itself.

Colonel Leader Chairman.

Colonel Leader has been appointed chairman of the committee for this work by the department of education at Salem. The other members of the committee are Colonel Sharpe, of the Oregon Agricultural College, and E. F. Carleton, of the state department of education. The work will be under the direct supervision of the school boards of the high school districts but subject to direction, supervision and inspection as the governor of the state may order.

The officers of the third Oregon State Officers' Training camps, which Colonel Leader met in Portland, were all very anxious to come back and resume command at the fourth training camps. In fact, everyone he talked to, said Colonel Leader, was enthusiastic over the fourth camp and he is sure of a large attendance.

Alma D. Katz in Charge.

Alma D. Katz, who visited at the University recently to examine applicants for the artillery schools from the third training camp, now has charge of the examination of the applicants for the infantry schools as well. This means that all applications to the central officers' training camps from now on will go through the hands of Mr. Katz.

Colonel Leader described the celebrations upon the news of the peace rumors in Portland as quite wild. The streets were jammed with crowds talking, yelling and fighting. The colonel says he was almost torn up trying to get through the crowds.

ONTHANK RED CROSS HEAD

Karl W. Onthank, secretary to President Campbell, has been appointed Red Cross representative for the University by the Northwestern Division of the Red Cross. He will go to Seattle tomorrow to discuss plans for Red Cross organization here with Earl Kilpatrick, director of development for the Northwest division. Mr. Onthank will visit Camp Lewis and the University of Washington and will return to the University campus Tuesday.

MISS FITCH RETURNS

Miss Louise Fitch, last year home mother at Delta Delta Delta, landed in the United States October 18 from France where she was sent last year by the Y. W. C. A. to inspect French womanhood under all sorts of working conditions. The purpose of her tour of France was to supply her with first hand information which she is to give to American women in a tour of lectures.

Friendship in Business

Successful business concerns are fast disproving the old adage, "There's no friendship in business."

On all sides it is being recognized that the only business worth while is founded on enduring friendship.

To further such a relation, there is careful study of how to give service, how to give truthful and enlightening information and how to give the kind of merchandise most adaptable to the needs of the customer and most lasting in satisfaction.

Moreover, there is a spirit of trying to help people in a scientific and professional way to attain their individual ideals.

Stores that have seen the dawn of this new era would not think of taking any advantage of their patrons.

Patrons themselves are growing more and more reasonable and less insistent upon conditions which do not permit the merchants to make a fair profit.

Stores and their patrons are coming to realize that every business transaction ought to be mutually profitable.

Thus is established a firm basis for genuine Friendship in Business.
