THE EMERALD STAFF

An enlarged Emerald staff is announced in this issue. This is but a partial staff and is made up for the most part of journalists who have had one or more years' experience on the paper. The appointment of this new number of writers does not mean that there is now no chance to secure a position on the Emerald staff. There are yet a number of reporter's positions to fill and other appointments will be made as soon as applicants make known their ability by test. Furthermore these new appointments are tentative inasmuch as they will hold good only as long as the new members keep up their work in good style and live up to the requirements made by the Emerald and its staff of editors.

The Emerald demands a price from all its workers. Staff membership cannot be had without a demand for loyal work and servitude on the part of every one of its members. The staff is liable to be changed several times during the year. The tried and true will remain while those who are not willing to make the sacrifices their positions bring will have to give way to those who will.

To the people who are now working for the Emerald and who are not mentioned on this staff let us advise you not to become discouraged. Your efforts are being watched carefully. Continued effort on your part will bring weighty consideration for appointment to the staff. It is not the brilliant writer that has the best chance of securing an appointment. Consistent effort, dependability, loyal service, alertness and a willingness to sacrifice other things for the Emerald are the cardinal virtues taken into consideration in appointing new staff members.

PLEDGE DAY

Every student should attend assembly Thursday. It will be Oregon's annual pledge day and the ceremonies are so significant of University of Oregon ideals and spirit that no student should be absent.

Our University is one of the few institutions of learning that have an annual pledge day. It is a tradition at Oregon and one of the many expressions of Oregon ideals that have developed the democracy and high type of national and state patriotism that exists on the campus.

While the meaning of the words of our pledge are really deeply embedded in the mind of every student, nevertheless maybe the hurry and scurry of college life have caused some of us to forget the fact. Attend the ceremonies by all means. Repeat the pledge. It will make you feel better.

The Emerald is always glad to receive communications from its readers. If you have ideas on things you would like to see the Emerald express, tell us about them. The columns of the Emerald will always be open to material which its readers would like to express through its medium. Roses and stones will be accepted alike. One requirement is necessary, however, and that is that the communications be signed by the writer.

Write a letter tonight to some Oregon graduate or former student to come "Home" to watch us "Win Again." The alums really want to come. They don't need to be urged, but we do want them to feel that they will be welcome and a note however short will accomplish this purpose. Tell them to remember THE one important date of this term—Homecoming, November 15.

Students who go to the library to study can easily be distinguished from those who go for company or curiosity. The earnest students sit facing the wall while the others sit in a strategic position facing the center aisle so that they can watch the good looking girls and handsome men go in and out.

Everybody thinks that the other fellow is queer. Even friends with whom we are well acquainted do things in ways that to us are incomprehensible. It all simmers down to what the Quaker said to his friend, to wit: "Everybody is crazy except thee and me and even thee art a little queer."

Sometimes everything seems all wrong in life. In such a mood most people will agree with George Bernard Shaw when he says: "The longer I live on this earth the more certain I become that the other planets use this world for a lunatic asylum."

Why look on the dark side of life? This may be a very imperfect old world but there is a good deal of fun in it. The man who had been knocked head over heels by a speeding auto had the right idea when he picked himself up and said that he was glad he hadn't been run over by a locomotive.—H.S.

GRAD WRITES MORTON

Ben Breeding Now Oil Salesman and Accountant in Ohio

In a letter to Dean D. Walter Morton, Ben B. Breeding, an old University of Oregon man, tells of his work as salesman for the Henry L. Doherty company of Toledo, Ohio. Besides selling oil, Breeding is doing accounting on the side, which, he said, added materially to his net income at the end of the month.

Breeding said, "No matter what they say about the East, it's hard to compare with the West." He also went on to say that he preferred a canoe or fishing pole any time to a show or cabaret.

"And how is Oregon by now—I imagine all is sailing along serenely and 'fall cases' are becoming serious enough to lower quizz grades—always the same," is one of the interesting paragraphs in Breeding's letter. He was a Sigma Chi here.

Law Studes Called To Settle Dispute Caused by Auction

Heated arguments and redhot rebuttals will invade the dignified peace and quiet of the law library on Wednesday evening, according to advance reports of the second session of moot court, which will convene at that time. One Harrington is suing Richardson for damages to the extent of reimbursement for money spent and time lost by the party of the first part when he attempts to purchase from said Richardson at an "honest" auction sale an equine of rare value.

Gloss and Burleigh will act as counsel for the appellant while Conrad and Ingram will handle the respondent's side of the argument. According to the records and history of the case, it would appear that said Harrington bid on a certain highly valued steed at an auction sale wherein the aforesaid Richardson was auctioneer. Harrington failed to get the horse for the claimed reason that the owner stepped in and overbid him a few paltry dollars just before the auctioneer's hammer fell for the last time; whereupon the appellant proclaimed a crooked deal and began suit for damages for valuable time and money spent in attempting to secure the aforementioned horse.

McKay will occupy the exalted position of chief justice while Kingsley and Wade will act as associate justices. This is in all seriousness, for, be it remembered, that this case is before the supreme court—of moot court.

GIRLS' GLEE SELECTED

TWENTY-THREE CHOSEN OUT OF SEVENTY WHO TRIED

Plans Made for Short Trips Before Christmas—Long Tour to Follow

Twenty-three out of the seventy girls who tried out were finally chosen to make up the Girls' Glee club, after 40 of them had been asked to make a second appearance for a final voting. With such a large initial turnout this year, Helen Manning, manager of the Girls' Glee club, is looking forward to a most successful year.

The 23 girls chosen are as follows: First soprano—Beulah Keagy, Adah McMurphy, Alice Gahky, Genevieve Clancy, Jeannette Crossfield, Florence Garrett.

Second soprano—Joy Judkins, Arbelyn Healy, Lois Muir, Gladys Ellsworth, Emily Spaeth, Marjorie Holman.

First alto—Marvel Skeels, Margaret Phelps, Mildred Bettinger, Bernice Alstock.

Second alto—Grace Miller, Laura Rand, Gladys Lane, Hattie Mitchell, Margaret Wells, Kate Chatburn, Helen Manning.

FIFTEEN TURN OUT ON SOCCER FIELD

Team Probably to Play O. A. C.—Effort Being Made to Secure Dymont as Coach

Fifteen men reported for the first soccer practice of the year held on Cemetery ridge Monday afternoon. About 35 men have signed up for soccer this season, according to Dwight Parr, who is manager of soccer this year. Every effort is being made to obtain Colin V. Dymont, professor in the journalism department, as coach. Dymont has coached the varsity teams in several past years and according to the old soccer men "he can't be beat."

Manager Parr says that just as soon as the suits arrive probably all of the men signed up will be out for the team. The suits have been ordered for two weeks and they are expected any day.

Concerning the schedule, Parr says that no games are definitely arranged for, but according to custom there will probably be an Oregon-O. A. C. game. Efforts are being made to secure other games.
