

PACIFIC GRID HONORS HELD BY OREGON TEAM

Oregon will do more to influence the Pasadena people in their choice of a western representative, according to Manager M. F. McLain. "If the southern people wish to choose the best team in the west, it cannot do otherwise than choose Oregon. But it is up to them to decide and it is their privilege to choose whomever they wish."

Authorities Favor Lemon-Yellow.
That Oregon has the strongest aggregation west of the Rockies has been admitted practically by all the authorities of the northwest. Sam Dolan, veteran referee, who officiated in the Oregon-Washington games is loud in his praise of the lemon-yellow. A few days ago he said:

"Oregon outplayed and decisively defeated Washington. Oregon is the logical team to play at Pasadena."

The sport writers of all the Portland papers who have watched the main controversies of the year are unanimous in their opinion that the Oregon eleven is the strongest that has played this year on the coast.

Coach Huntington will not consider playing a post-season game in order to decide which eleven is to meet the "cream" of the east. Such a game, he holds, is unnecessary to decide the coast championship.

Elimination Games Turned Down.
"We are undisputed champions of the coast conference," he said, "there is no question about that. Whether Pasadena invites us to play an eastern team is for them to decide. We do not intend to play any more games to earn the right to play New Year's day, and it is unfair to the members of any team to ask them to do so."

The reported claim of southern California to a right to play in a post-season series for the championship comes as a distinct surprise to all northerners. The southerners base their claim on their recent victory over Stanford, and the close score of the California-Southern California clash. There are only two contests that the Trojans have played against coast conference elevens, so their percentage would not measure up to that of Oregon and Washington.

Decision to Be Made Soon.
Word has leaked out from the southern headquarters that the decision will be made early this week. Until this decision is made Oregon will rest on her oars. The clash against Multnomah on Turkey day proved to be a rough contest, but the varsity clearly outplayed the clubmen. The only serious injury sustained was by Hollis Huntington, whose nose was broken during the fracas.

If Oregon is chosen to uphold the honors of the west coast she will send a team that will truly represent the west. Unless such a choice is made the 1919 season on the gridiron is history for the lemon-yellow.

Mask and Buskin Keeps Name of Prevaricator Saturday Night For Surprise

"Who is the Liar?" The mystery is still unsolved. Could it be Adah McMurphy or Marion Gilstrap? Possibly it is, but that would be telling. However the Prince of Liars will perform on Saturday evening at the Eugene theatre for the benefit of the student volunteer fund and many laughs are promised by Mask and Buskin, sponsors for the production. The student committee, which is composed of members from each organization on the campus, has charge of selling the tickets, which are now on sale. Students at large who have charge of selling tickets are Roy Veatch, Henry English, Warren Kays, Bill Purdy or Norman Phillips in the library. The box office at the Eugene theatre will be opened Friday morning and reservations can be made at that time.

- HARVARD TO REPRESENT EAST IN BIG CONTEST
- If Oregon is chosen to play at Pasadena, she will be pitted against one of the greatest institutions of football history.
- Harvard has been chosen and has accepted the invitation of the Pasadena people to meet the best of the west on New Year's day. Announcement to this effect was given out at the southern city last night.
