

Coming Clash With Harvard Recalls Victory Over Penn

Three Veterans of '16 Team Will Meet Crimson; 27,000 Persons Watched Contest When Oregon Humbled Folwell's Eleven

When Oregon and Harvard line up for the biggest gridiron classic ever staged, will western football prove superior to eastern football? Oregon says it will! It has been proved before and the lemon-yellow warriors are bent on repeating Oregon's performance of January 1, 1917, when she whipped Pennsylvania State by a 14 to 0 score.

Three years ago the Oregon eleven went to Pasadena on New Year's day where it met the strongest team the east could produce. Pennsylvania had booked a string of telling victories over all her opponents, clinching the big game of the season by defeating Cornell 23-3. The easterners were considered the ultimate in football perfection. Their system of aerial attacks was lauded as undefeatable.

Oregon won her right to represent the west through her victory over W. S. C., 12 to 3. Every other game of the season had been won by Oregon save her encounter with Washington University which resulted in a 0-0 tie.

Over 27,000 people witnessed the game which started listlessly. The first half ended with a 0-0 score, but with the bulk of the playing in Pennsylvania's favor. Beckett and Montieth, for Oregon slightly surpassed the kicking of Howard and Berry. Three attempts by Pennsylvania to drop kick were disastrously blocked. Near the end of the second period, Mitchell saved the day for Oregon by throwing Quimby for a 15 yard loss when Pennsylvania had advanced the ball to Oregon's 15 yard line.

With the ball in Oregon's possession, Shy Huntington, at present Oregon's coach, but then its quarterback, started things in the third period with a split buck and hidden ball play that carried the ball 20 yards from the center of the field. Hollis Huntington hit the line for yardage and a few more short gains took the pigskin to the 17 yard line where Shy passed it over the goal line into Tegart's waiting hands. Shy caught the punt-out and converted the goal.

Johnny Parsons, Oregon's right half, started fireworks when he intercepted a Pennsylvania pass on the 42 yard line and skipped around Miller, Penn's All American end, and trotted down to the two yard line where someone spilled him. A line buck took Oregon over for a tally and Shy again kicked goal.

With a 14-0 score against them, Pennsylvania stiffened, but was unable to come within scoring distance. Passes and punts were blocked by the Oregon backs. Oregon's line, which had been considered much weaker than Penn's, held unbroken under a series of smashing attacks.

Bartlett, Oregon's right tackle, and Shy Huntington were lauded as the heroes of the game. Shy was referred to by the Portland Oregonian as a "Napoleon of the football field". Parsons and Montieth came in for a large share of the glory through their consistent tackling.

Fourteen to nothing was also the score which Washington State chalked up against Brown University in the encounter at Pasadena in 1916.

R. C. Folwell, Pennsylvania's veteran coach, paid a tribute to western football when he frankly declared in 1917 Oregon's eleven better than his own.

Three veterans of the Pennsylvania game will be in the lineup at Pasadena on New Year's day. Hollis Huntington, Kenneth Bartlett and Bas Williams who started their football careers under Hugo Bezdek, will tackle the eastern team for the second time.

Bart Spellman, right guard for the lemon-yellow in the 1917 game, is still with Oregon, though not in the lineup. He is assistant coach on the training staff.

G. Cook, first string sub at Pasadena in '17, is represented only by a gold star. Cook enlisted when the United States entered the recent war, and was killed in France on the last day of the struggle, November 11, 1918.

The Pennsylvania encounter proved that the dope was only made to be spilled. Pennsylvania was accredited with a considerable lead over the Eugene players.
