

WESTERN FOOTBALL IS PLACED ON LEVEL WITH BEST IN EAST

Harvard Held To One Point Margin In Hard Game At Pasadena

OUTLOOK FOR 1920 GOOD

Several Stars to Be Lost But New Material in Sight is Rated High in Ability

New Year's day brought to a close one of the most successful seasons of football that the University of Oregon has ever enjoyed. When the Varsity played to a standstill the much touted heavy Harvard eleven, losing 7 to 6, it made history for the Lemon-yellow that will never be forgotten.

Immediately upon the completion of the active season on the gridiron the opening of the fiveside league was announced, and the name of Oregon has spread all over the country as a result of the wonderful showing in Pasadena. All the sport critics gave Oregon an edge on the playing in that greatest of all classics and the one outstanding factor that appealed to the spectators was the "Oregon fight" which predominated from whistle to whistle.

Oregon Prestige Secure

The record made during the past season did more for Oregon prestige than any event that has ever been held. The 1917 game against Pennsylvania, it is true, showed the football world that the west, and especially Oregon, could hold her own with any of the country, but there was still some doubt in the minds of many. The eastern sport writers at that time came forth with an abundance of alibis for the east, such as condition and foreign grounds, but this year there was no opportunity for excuses for the showing of the eastern aggregation.

The main reason for Oregon's defeat was the large number of substitutes that Coach Fisher of Harvard had on hand to send into the fray. As soon as a man began to weaken, he sent in another to replace him and the second string men proved to be as strong if not stronger than the first stringers. Oregon, on the other hand, had to rely on a few men, and as a result suffered every time a new Harvard man was sent in.

H. Huntington Sets Record

Two new names were placed beside those of the many former football stars as a result of the game. For Harvard, Arnold Horween was the best ground gainer and outshone the much-heralded Casey, who was looked upon as the greatest Harvard back. For Oregon H. Huntington made a reputation for himself as the star of the fracas, making 150 yards from scrimmage. Steers kept up his stride and played a wonderful game at quarter and injuries alone kept him from showing more than he did in the contest. The whole Harvard team made only 169 yards from scrimmage. Oregon's total was 293 yards.

Now that the season is past, attention naturally turns to prospects for the coming year. If the unexpected does not happen, a great deal of material will be on hand when the first call is made next fall.

Three Great Players Lost

Ken Bartlett, "Baz" Williams and Hollis Huntington will be lost through graduation. These men were three of Oregon's best warriors during the season and their loss will be greatly felt. Besides these, it is doubtful if the Leslie brothers will be back in October. Both of them have another year of gridiron sport before them, but are not planning on returning. A few others have spoken of not coming back, so Oregon will lose a great number of her mainstays at the end of this year.

The remaining first and second string men alone form a good nucleus for a good aggregation for next year and besides these a great deal of material was developed on the freshman team of this year. Three of the men were used in the Multnomah game and proved themselves to be of Varsity calibre.

GEOLOGY DEPARTMENT HEAD WHO LEAVES OREGON NEXT SPRING

DR. WARREN D. SMITH

Dr. Warren D. Smith, head of the department of geology, will leave the University in June on a year's leave of absence, which he will spend in the Philippine islands as chief of the bureau of mines. This position Dr. Smith held before coming to the University six years ago, was offered him again on a permanent basis, but Dr. Smith would accept it for only one year. His compensation will be $4000 and practically all his expenses. Dr. Smith has within the last month refused to consider two other offers, one for oil survey work in Mexico and the other a University post in the East which would have paid him $3600 a year.

SPIRAL LEGGINGS ARRIVE

Shipment of Signal Flags, Semaphore and Wigwag Received

The ordnance department of the R. O. T. C. is now equipped to issue spiral leggings to all of the men in the corps. During the holidays a shipment large enough to supply all of the men was received. Sergeant Reed announces that men to whom canvas leggings were issued may turn them in and receive wraps in their place.

A shipment of signal flags, both wigwag and semaphore was also received. The barracks now has a complete first aid outfit including five regulation army stretchers. These will be used in the first aid instruction which will be given the latter part of this term.

REGISTRATION SHOWS GAIN OF 326 OVER LAST TERM FIGURES

1600 Mark Probably Will Be Reached This Week, Says Registrar

EIGHT STUDENTS DROPPED

Art and Architecture Departments Recently Put in Major List, Have Increase

The number registering at the University this quarter is slightly larger than the first semester, the total, up to this morning, being 1507 as compared with 1181 registered during the first three days of the previous quarter. It is thought that that the 1600 mark will be reached by the end of the week.

Only 300 took advantage of the two extra days allowed for registration, the majority of the students making their schedules out after the Christmas holidays.

There is an exceptionally large enrollment in architecture and the arts, especially in household arts as this is the first year in which one could major in that department. Miss Helen Rhodes, assistant professor of drawing, had to have eight more desks installed in order to accommodate the increase in one class, and has been turning students away.

Commerce Records Incomplete

In other departments the number of students is about the same as during the first quarter. In the school of commerce the records are incomplete, but up to the present the number of majors is perhaps 25 less, although there are many studying subjects in the department who are taking the majority of their courses in another department.

The registration of new students in the school of journalism has cancelled the number failing to obtain passing grades. There are still about 110 majors.

Considerable interest is being shown in the applied anatomy and mechanism of movement course, given for sophomores in the department of physical education. It is the first strictly technical course offered. The class has never had a larger membership than nine, but is now composed of 15 members.

50 Majors in Music

There are 50 majors in the school of music, and 75 others who are taking work. It is thought that others who do not desire college credit will register later.

According to Carlton E. Spencer, registrar, eight students have been dropped from college for failing two terms in succession. A total of 30 have been placed on probation and are liable to be dropped at any time their work is low.

PROF. PACKARD BACK AFTER GEOLOGY TRIP

Richard Nelson, '19, Assists in Survey of Oil Seeps in Northwest

Professor E. L. Packard of the geology department has just returned to his duties at the University after six months field work in Oregon and western Washington. During this time Professor Packard covered several thousand miles by auto and investigated practically every oil seep reported in Oregon and Washington.

He was assisted in his work by Richard Nelson, a graduate of June, 1919. Nelson has done very good work since graduation, Professor Packard said, and has been given a permanent position by the company for which they were working. Nelson is now located at Colinga, in Fresno county, California.

Professor Packard has been located at San Francisco since Thanksgiving. He declined to go into detail regarding his experiences during the summer and fall while investigating reported oil prospects, but he promised that he would have many interesting little incidents to relate to his geology classes from time to time.

STUDENT VOLUNTEER DELEGATES ARRIVE WITH NEW PLANS

8040 People Register On Second Day of National Conference

WONDERFUL SPIRIT SHOWN

Plans for Vesper Service Being Made to Present Program to Students

The first students to return from the World Student Conference in Des Moines arrived on the campus this morning with many new ideas to present to the students, according to John Houston, business manager for the delegation. "A program is being arranged the way we want to present it to the students but the faculty has not yet agreed to the plans," says Houston, "but it is our desire to hold a Vesper Service soon at which we may present to the students all we brought back with us. The convention was entirely different from what were expecting, emphasizing missionary work by college men and women and some national topics were discussed."

The delegation from Oregon left Portland on December 28, arriving in Des Moines when the convention started January 4. "On arriving," says Houston, "we registered at the city hall and by the end of the second day of the convention 8040 had registered. The meetings were held at the Collosum at Des Moines and delegates from practically all over the world were present, all South American countries were represented as well as the West Indies, China, Japan, India and all presented their cases."

All colleges were seated in sections according to the districts from which they came. The Oregon delegation was able to meet with other delegations and this way obtain new ideas on student government and organization.

"The spirit was wonderful," declared Houston, "with so many colleges represented, all giving their yells and all the speakers were live wires. It was most worth while."

"The convention," declared Houston, "broadened our viewpoint of things. It showed to us the value of missionary work in college, the value of relationship between colleges. The spirit brought the east and the west closer together than they ever have been before. We want to let the student know what the convention was and what we received from it, also the value of the whole thing and what a monstrous thing it was in the whole. Announcements will be made as soon as definite plans for the vesper service have been arranged."

"Bill" Hayward

OREGON MAY LOSE TRAINER HAYWARD

BILL CONSIDERING OFFER—SOON TO MAKE DECISION—HERE FOR 16 YEARS

Whether Bill Hayward, veteran trainer of Oregon athletes, will remain here or accept an offer from another institution at a largely increased salary is expected to be decided within the next few days.

During the holidays word reached the campus that Hayward had received an offer from another college regarding his services in the future. A telegram was sent to the trainer who replied that he would take no action until he had had an opportunity to discuss the situation personally with President Campbell.

Bill Hayward has been connected with the University since 1904, and has trained several men who have broken records in track events. Through his services Oregon men have invariably been kept in tip top condition for gridiron contests. Hayward has succeeded in putting the men in condition for post-season games, as the defeat of the University of Pennsylvania and the narrow margin of Harvard's victory testify.

BIG TOURNEY IS PLANNED

Women Basketeers to Compete in Interclass Games Soon

Miss Emma Waterman, coach of basketball, said that all those who have any hopes of making their class team should be out for every practice in the next two weeks. More seniors are urged to turn out for practice.
