STUDENT LIVING COST SOARS DURING YEAR

few cases would they be the same with two students.

In 1915-16, records of the students living committee show that nearly fifty men students were batching. This year very few students are batching owing to the fact that many of them are drawing state aid money and that during vacation they have been making good wages. The cost of living for the batching student in 1915-16 was surprisingly low, in some cases as low as $5.00 per month, and in others as high as $12.00.

There are few batching students at the University this year. Some began batching last fall but found that, considering the increased cost of materials and the time spent, it was about as cheap to live with a private family or in the dormitories. As nearly as can be ascertained a maximum for the batching student this year is about $25.00 per month.

Supplies up 60 Percent

The increase cost of books, papers, pencils, etc., according to figures obtained from the University book store, has reached a maximum average of about sixty per cent, the major portion of the increase coming within the last four months. The increase on the cost of books varies greatly, while the increase on pencils has raised from $4.00 to $6.50 per dozen. Fountain pens have remained the same.

The expense to the student whose home is in Eugene varies greatly. In many cases they live at home getting their board and lodging, while in some cases where the students are able they pay a little toward the general family fund. In other cases the student pays the actual cost of the materials used. The expense to these students would be, on a comparative basis, much lower than that of the student living in a house or club.

EASTERN TRIP SHOWS MEDICS RECOGNIZING UNIVERSITY SCHOOL

Thienes Reports Following Return From Student Convention

Portland, Ore. Jan. 31—(Special)—That the work given in the University of Oregon Medical School during the first two years is equal if not superior to that given over the same period in other schools was further supported in a statement by Clinton Thienes, who was one of the delegates of the Medical school to the Student Volunteer Conference at Des Moines. At a special supper for medical students at the conference, Thienes met many students from other medical schools and was able to learn something of the work done in their schools.

"I was particularly interested in the courses in anatomy given in other schools, for this is the most important course of the first year and is most criticised by freshmen in a medical school. I discovered that not one of the students with whom I talked had had as good a course as is given a Oregon. At Johns Hopkins there is practically no instruction and students work in the laboratory without the aid of either book or instructor. There are no lectures or recitations and the grade received for the course depends entirely on the final examination. In many schools no special course in neurology is given, but the study of the nervous system, both peripheral and central, is made a part of the course in gross anatomy."

In the large schools such as Johns Hopkins and Harvard, there is the supposed advantage of the great men of the profession, but students from these schools say that they see these men about twice a year.

Several times during the convention Thienes talked with Bill Livingston, who took his pre-medic work at the University of Oregon and his first year of medicine at the University of Oregon Medical school. Livingstone is now a senior in Harvard medical school and is president of his class.

The work of Jackson and McKittrick for the Willamette five almost proved fatal to the varsity in the first half, with McKittrick feeding the ball to Jackson who seldom missed a basket.
