IN THE INTEREST OF ACCURACY

The present system of handling house grades is meeting with opposition by students, who are reporting their complaints not only to the registrar's office, but to the Emerald. We realize that it is a thankless task to compile the grades for all students, but we suggest that next term the houses be allowed to look over the registrar's lists of members in organizations before the grades are compiled. This term, some of the houses were not informed that their lists of members, sent in the first week in October to the Dean's office, were to be used in compiling the grades several months later. Other members were pledged after this date, and one house, not understanding that the Dean wished the full membership of the chapter, when only the members in the house were asked, omitted their town members from the list.

The registrar's staff puts the entire blame on the houses and refuses to print the corrections, by which some houses advanced two or three places in the list.

OREGON GIVES WELCOME

On Wednesday the people of Eugene and Lane county are to be guests of the University. They are coming not to look at the grounds and the buildings but to see the students in their everyday work. They are people who are helping support the University, and are displaying a laudable interest in it by giving their time to inform themselves correctly as to conditions.

In a few months these people are to be asked to give their support to a measure which means a great deal to every student in the institution, a measure upon the success of which depends a very great extent the future development and expansion of the University of Oregon itself. The University need make no extra effort to demonstrate how crowded and inadequate present facilities are, but it show its visitors actual conditions in the buildings, class rooms and library.

Each student should feel that he owes it to the University and to himself as well to be present on the campus Wednesday morning, to attend the special assembly in Villard hall, and to help in every way to make the University's guests feel at home. It is an opportunity to show loyalty to Old Oregon, and Oregon needs that loyalty now as she has seldom needed it before.

Announcement

Those interested in taking part in the opera Cavallera Rusticana, to be presented by the opera chorus this spring, should see Professor Lukken at once. The newly organized chorus will be limited to a membership of about 25 people and competition is keen.

Music and Dancing Mark Opening of New Tea Room "The Anchorage"

(By Mildred Weeks)

With lights glowing from every window, with music floating across the water, with hearth fires snapping and dancing, and tea-sets shining beneath rose and blue shaped lamps, the Anchorage on the Mill Race was opened Thursday evening with a reception in honor of the University faculty and students.

The dance hall was wide open, the music was in full swing, the fire crackled cheerfully, while glowing Japanese lanterns beneath the fir boughs that covered the ceiling transformed the hall into a fairyland.

The tea house itself is a delightful place with its color scheme carried out in pastel shades. The walls and furniture are gray, the draperies are yellow with boxes of Japanese primroses beneath the window ledge, the tea sets are varicolored of green, blue, rose and yellow, and here and there among the tables are tiny lamps of rose and blue. A fire place on either floor lends an air of coziness with their crackling fires. The downstairs will accommodate 40 persons and will be for general use, while the upstairs tea room will seat 35 and, with the balcony, will be for private parties.

The Anchorage is being opened by Miss Mary Keiffer and Miss Carrie B. Rorertson who, with Mrs. P. L. Campbell, Mrs. F. F. Marshall and Dean Elizabeth Fox, were in the receiving line at Thursday evening's reception.

The Anchorage will be open for luncheon, tea and fountain service, and special dinners. Judging by Thursday's reception, Oregon will soon have another institution that will more than double the popularity of the mill race.

SWISS GLOBE TROTTER REGISTERS AT UNIVERSITY

were only a few on the surface. I have my shares yet."

From his trunk he took a bundle of papers and spread them out. They were all shares issued by the Johannesburg Diamond Syndicate. "Not worth a cent" he remarked.

After returning to Switzerland he said, he became an agent for the International Sleeping Car Co. with headquarters in Paris. In this capacity he visited every important city of Europe and Asia Minor. He made 18 trips to Constantinople and in these travels became very much interested in international affairs.

He arrived in Canada prior to the World War. In 1914 he offered his services to the Dominion but was not accepted. He said he did not know the reason for his rejection.

In speaking of his native country, Mr. Buholzer said, "there are no strong political parties in Switzerland. The political parties are mostly debating societies which exercise no influence over individual votes. The newspapers have no political affiliations, but the Catholic and the Protestant churches control the press. The United States and Switzerland are the two countries which will make the world safe for democracy. Switzerland has been a republic since 1291 and today has the greatest per capita wealth of any nation in the world.

"Every man when he becomes a citizen is given five acres of land. For this he is supposed to serve his country at any time called upon, up to the age of 37. In 1914 Switzerland had mobolized 250,000 soldiers on her frontier before Germany had fairly started to concentrate her troops. Preparedness and lack of political parties is what kept my country out of war," he said.

"Because of the land allottment there are no classes in Switzerland One person has about as much money as another, and there is no extreme poverty."

Buholer says he is interested in political science and thinks the league of nations will create a demand for men skilled in that subject. American literature and history also appeal to him and he intends to major in law at the University.

Speaking of the league of nations, he said that it would make the United States a most powerful factor in European politics.

DEAN ALLEN SEES SUPPRT ON PORTLAND TRIP

Head of Journalism School Reads Paper at Meeting of Press Club

Professor E. W. Allen, dean of the University school of journalism, has just returned from Portland where he read a paper Wednesday evening on "The Professional Idea of Journalism" before the Portland Press Club, to which the women's advertising club was invited.

While there Professor Allen visited the University campaign headquarters in the Pittock block where Colin V. Dyment has charge of the millage campaign for the University. There seemed to be no opposition from the people, said Professor Allen in speaking of the May measure to raise money for the University. The people seem to understand the condition at the University. The greatest difficulty, stated Professor Allen, is a ballot already overloaded with tax measures.

During the time that Professor Allen spent in the campaign headquarters a traveling man came in who, he said, was a loyal booster for education. This man, said Professor Allen, was in the habit of sending a post card ahead to let the people know that he was coming. He left a bundle of these cards at the office and told the committee in charge to put anything on the cards that would boost the measure. When he arrived at these various places he would have an opportunity to talk it over with the people personally.

OREGON WOMEN TO CONTEST WITH O.A.C. IN MAJOR ATHLETICS

Basketball, Swimming, Tennis Meets Arranged; Faculty Members Out

Inter-collegiate sports for women are to be featured this year at the University of Oregon, according to Miss Mabel Cummings, head of the department of physical education for women. Oregon teams will meet O. A. C. teams in basketball, swimming and tennis. Basketball will be played this term but the swimming and tennis meets will come later in the season.

Practice for the Varsity team started Wednesday afternoon in the women's outdoor gymnasium. Two full teams will be chosen in order to have a substitute for each position.

A faculty team will be formed which will play each of the class teams. Miss Mary Perkins, of the English department, Miss Mozelle Hair, of the extension division, Miss Katherine Winslow and Miss Emma Waterman, instructors in physical education, are among those of the faculty who have expressed their intention of turning out for basketball. Miss Mabel Cummings will referee the games.

A doughnut volleyball league is soon to be formed among the women. This series will be played off during the winter term.
