STUDENTS ASKED TO HELP

Student co-operation is urged for the Interchurch World Movement, which is to be presented on the Oregon campus tonight, Wednesday and Thursday. The representatives who are visiting the campus are able speakers chosen from scores of people interested in this movement which is endorsed by all Christian churches.

The purpose of the Interchurch World Movement is not only to interest people who profess Christianity, but is to inform all students in American colleges and universities of the current changes which are at present taking place in the Christian as well as the political world. From the viewpoint of obtaining an all-round education, students should be interested in receiving the information as it is presented by the speakers who will visit the campus. The stereopticon lecture which is to be given Wednesday night in the Y. M. C. A. Hut was given during the Student Volunteer convention in Des Moines and the University student delegates have pronounced it the sort of lecture every Oregon student will be interested in attending.

The representatives will go to O. A. C. after leaving the University and the students of Oregon want to make as good a showing of interest as the students of O. A. C.

TURN OUT AND VOTE

On Thursday at 4 o'clock a special student body election will be held in Villard hall to dispose of the seven amendments to the student body constitution proposed at the last regular meeting. While several of these changes are mere routine matters to bring the constitution up to date, others are very important and should be understood and voted upon by as large a portion of the students as possible.

Such amendments as the winning of football letters, election of the yell leader, recognition of the orchestra and reorganization of the forensics council are matters of concern to all students. A heavy vote upon them will mean a great deal to the persons or organizations directly affected by the change. We feel that all the measures proposed were carefully considered before submission and that they deserve the support of the students. For this reason if for no other all students should make an effort to spare the few minutes needed Thursday afternoon, and attend the special election.

If the students elect their own yell leaders a few of the R. O. T. C. officers should stand a good chance. They certainly have plenty of opportunity to exercise their lungs.

Oregon won both debates in the recent triangular contest. All of which caused some of the old faculty members to rub their hands and remark that it looked like the good old days once more.

MOONLIGHT HIKE AND TOASTED EATS LURE

Hendricks and Friendly Halls Unite First of Many Outdoor Parties Planned

A moonlight hike, a big bonfire and toasted eats was the order of events Friday night at Hendricks hall. The big round moon lured about 60 young people from Hendricks and Friendly halls up to the hills, where in an open space on the hillside beyond the park they settled down to toast and eat, while the firelight cast dancing shadows on the close green trees.

The route was up over Fairmount boulevard to the other side of the hill, and then straight down through the woods until the picnickers were lost and had to start an "Oskey" to notify the advance guard to wait for them. When the main body arrived at the fire it was blazing merrily, and the toasting sticks were immediately collected from the bushes. The weinies and buns disappeared rapidly, then marshmallows took their place until everything was gone. The next thing was dreamy college songs and popular songs for half the group, while the other half formed a ring "a la fairies" and danced on the steep hillside in a carefree game of "drop the handkerchief" and "three deep." The other road brought them home through the Park.

The party was chaperoned by Miss Gertrude Talbot, and is the first of many outdoor affairs planned by the Hall for the spring.

CAMPUS ART TALENT DEMONSTRATION HELD

Design Class Construct Patterns For Printing of Tapestries and Table Runners

Block printing, one of the oldest methods of getting patterns on cloth, introduced first by the Chinese and Japanese many years ago, is being taught in Miss Helen Rhodes' class of second year students in design.

The designs are of Aztec origin, all inspirations being derived from Indian interpretations, according to Miss Rhodes. The blocks, made by each student, are of wood, with a piece of linoleum pasted over the top, the design being carved on this. The upraised portions of the block are painted with a mixture of oil paints and turpentine before the stamping process begins, says Miss Rhodes. Silks are used for curtains, cushions or costume designing, while ordinary flour sacks make the best material to work on and produce the best results as the texture of the cloth is best brought out in this. It is used for table runners or tapes.

The third term Miss Rhodes will introduce work in Batik design, a Japanese craft, recently brought into this country. Only a few pieces of this work will be made next term she stated.

The block printing was done Tuesday, demonstrating the method to anyone who wished to see it. "There will probably be more class work done Thursday and all who care to come may do so," said Miss Rhodes.
