

OREGON WILL ENTER TWO RELAY TEAMS IN U. OF W. CARNIVAL

Triangular Meet Is Called Off Owing to Soggy Track in Portland

Oregon will enter two teams in the relay carnival to be held next Saturday in Seattle, under the auspices of the University of Washington. The triangular meet between M. A. A. C., Oregon and O. A. C. scheduled for last Saturday was called off, not only because of the poor condition of the teams, but owing to the soggy track in Portland.

The quarter and half milers are to be worked hard during this week, according to Bill Hayward. He expects to enter two teams in the meet, a two mile and a one mile relay team. It is not known what men will make the trip to Seattle, for much will depend upon the week's work.

The Aggie track men are probably in better shape than any others of the Northwest cinder artists. This is because the Corvallis men have been able to work out in the armory during the long rainy spell. However, Captain Foster is optimistic in regard to the condition of the Oregon team. "Oregon ought to be in as good condition as any other northwest college," he said. "All of the colleges have been seriously handicapped by the adverse weather."

University of Montana, Idaho, W. S. C., O. A. C., University of Washington and University of Oregon will all enter teams in the relay carnival at Seattle Saturday.

ZOOLOGISTS CONDUCT MUSEUM EXPEDITION OVER APRIL VACATION

Animals of Coast Pine Strip Studied; Unnamed Man Gives Funds

Dr. John F. Bovard, head of the zoology department, and Hubert Prescott and Harley Holmes, majors in the department, are conducting a series of museum expeditions during the week-ends. They spent the April vacation on the coast studying a strip of pine forest along the ocean. The money for these expeditions was donated by a man not connected with the University who is especially interested in museum work, and who does not wish to make his name known for the present.

"It was known," said Dr. Bovard, "that the plant life in this pine strip was similar to the plant life in the pine forests of the mountains. The object of the expedition was to determine whether the animal life was similar to that of the higher regions, and it was found to be practically identical with the life in the mountain pine regions."

Typical mountain forms found on the trip were the mountain chickadee, the Townsend warbler found in high altitudes and in Alaska, the myrtle warbler, a mountain form, and the Oregon chickadee, which usually nests high. The golden crown kinglet, which nests in the high mountains but migrates to the lower regions, was also found.

About 90 specimens of birds were found, said Dr. Bovard, and were brought back to the University where they will be used as study specimens.

This is the first time a museum expedition has been financed by an outsider, he continued, and the gift will enable the three men to continue the work over week-ends until school is out. They expect to go over to the coast several times on these trips.

"I am happy to see the museum work revive again," said Dr. Bovard. "It has a good start now, and is ready to go in great shape."

THREE FROM GIRL'S GLEE CLUB ENTERTAIN

Gladys Lane, Genevieve Clancy, and Kate Chatburn Boost Millage Campaign in Wendling

Gladys Lane, Genevieve Clancy and Kate Chatburn, a trio from the Women's Glee club, made a decided impression on residents of Wendling when they put on a short entertainment there Friday evening before an organization of loggers, according to Leland A. Coon, instructor in the school of music and director of the Women's Glee club. After the musical numbers Miss Chatburn, the comedienne of the group, made a speech on the millage tax which proved to be effective to the extent that the ladies of the town volunteered to go through the mill to see if every man has registered.

Performances relative to this are to put on by the different groups of the men's and women's glee clubs, beginning this week and lasting indefinitely until May 21, the day of registration. A new interest and enthusiasm is felt through this plan and effort will be taken to make each of the programs and speeches as successful as this first one.

Remy Cox, head of this particular campaign, is making out a schedule for the next five or six weeks showing where and when the trips will be made and by whom. In this way the students can keep up with the interest in the work of fellow-students.

MAY 7 FINALLY SET FOR LEAP YEAR HOP

Women's League Dance to be Held in Spite of Postponements—Tickets One Dollar

Third time is charm—the date for the Women's League dance, twice postponed, is now definitely fixed for May 7, and as there is no other college entertainment scheduled for that evening the committees are planning for a record attendance. Any shy maid who couldn't get up enough courage to invite the man of her choice to the affair last term is thus given another chance. There are new students who are anxious to go, a few have left school, and so many changes will have to be made in the dancing programs that the eleventh-hour converts need not worry about filling their partner's programs.

Tickets are one dollar each, girls, and you have the privilege of taking your escort via a taxi, street car, or on foot, just as you may feel inclined and your finances permit.
