

THE MAN ON THE BOX

groom, coachman and rescuer of government plans were all expert and full of character. Count Karloff, the Russian diplomat, played by Si Simola, was the best of the character parts. The count changed from an honorable man working for his country, into an unscrupulous villain who still kept the sympathy of the audience even at his worst. Si Simola was entirely transformed from his campus self, and gave the audience several thrills and tremors in his foreign way. The other character part of the Magistrate Watts, was played fiercely and importantly by Norman Phillips, who made a magistrate that any criminal would tremble before. His softening toward Mrs. Conway was very effective, and the imminent danger he lingered in of giving away the mystery to Miss Betty's father aroused much laughter.
