THAT GREATER OREGON

The University is looking forward next year to the greatest year in its history, to a truly "Greater Oregon." To realize this hope in actuality the students must be more interested, however, in bringing more students to Oregon. It is so easy to shift the burden to someone else, to think, "Oh, of course there will be plenty of students at Oregon next year; why should I bother about it?" This attitude shows an absolute lack of Oregon Spirit, the spirit that has made the University of Oregon famous throughout the United States.

All the undergraduate students here this year should try to return to Oregon next year and bring with them several new students. The enthusiasm that each student feels for the University should make others care for it also. Give others the opportunity to know your alma mater, give them the chance to experience the joys which have been yours here. Explain to them the opportunities for self support at Oregon, if that happens to be of interest to them.

During your vacation, which we hope will be crowded with happy days, don't forget to work for Oregon. Then we will have a real "Greater Oregon" next year.

OUR BOW

With this issue the Emerald for 1919-1920 bids good-bye to the student body, and formally gives over the work of next year to the new staff. Although the editorial and business staffs part from the paper a little reluctantly, as from something which had begun to be a part of them, they do so also with a feeling of relief, for now they may snatch a night's sleep in peace.

The editor and business manager have regrets over the Emerald as a whole this year, regrets which probably had better go unvoiced. There have been difficulties of the increased cost of production which have been hard to meet and the paper has seldom been able to fulfill the editor's idea of just what a college paper should be. The Emerald has had a hard year in many ways, as have other student body activities, and the year would have been a harder one but for the spirit of co-operation of the staff, the student body and the faculty.

The Emerald wishes to take this opportunity of thanking all those who have worked so consistently for the good of the Emerald, the staff and the faculty and students of the school of journalism, particularly. We wish to thank the faculty for their support of the paper and their generous words of praise throughout the year and we wish to thank the student body for their faith in the Emerald, which is their paper.

The Emerald next year will be launched in the best year in the history of the University. The aid that will come from every student being a subscriber will be in itself a great help. Next year's staff hopes to be able to start a Daily Emerald. This has been the dream of the staff this year—a dream which could not materialize—but next year, conditions probably will make this possible.

The greatest of success and achievement for the University and the Emerald next year is the parting word of the 1919-1920 Emerald.

Almost every department is making a strong bid for another building this summer. About the only harmonious thing to do is to erect a student recitation hall and let the departments change buildings with each other.

Those who are most anxious to learn are not always received favorably. Witness the fellow who canvasses from table to table in the library evenings, attempting to track down a lost assignment.

The student who habitually comes to class without his assignment usually says that he couldn't find time. If he looked hard enough he might find it hiding behind a bunch of week-night dates.

The student who expects to be an old man when he graduates at least expects to gain his gray hairs from study, which is better than flunking out of college.

In the dramatics department "make-up" is considered an accomplished art but in the ordinary classroom it is considered a necessity.

The political science department did not get a chance to run a man in the last elections but the presidential elections are not far off.

With expectations of 2000 students next fall and only one new building, the drill shed may yet have to be used for clas rooms.

Most students know what "E Pluribus Unum" means, but how many know the meaning of "Mens Agitat Molem?"

Now that the weather is becoming warmer, afternoon strolls have given way to the porch swing.

The man who said "Ignorance is bliss," never counted on the post and probation system.

out about $2000 in the lead this year, which is by far the best financial year the student body has had.

President Gives Debate O's. President Campbell awarded the "O" pins to the members of both the men and women's teams who brought the honors in debate to Oregon this year. The winners in oratory were also awarded their "O." Following is a list of those receiving pins: Oratory, Fred Coley and Joe Boyd; women's debate, Ethel Wakefield, Wanda Daggett, Edna Sparling, Jennie Maguire, Elaine Cooper; men's debate, Remy Cox, Ernest Crockatt, Wilbur Carl, George Black, Elmer Pendell, Kenneth Armstrong, Ralph Hoerber, Don Davis and Paul aPtterson.

work both among faculty and students must keep pace with or outdistance the building program if Oregon is to become a bigger as well as a better university. This ideal was expressed by Professor Colin V. Dymont at the rally held in celebration of the passage of the millage bill.

Investment in Research. "The people were investing this money," said Mr. Dymont, "in the spirit of mental research. They are giving us this money on credit. Not on compensation for past achievement not for what we are doing now, but on faith for what they thought we would accomplish. It is up to us to make this a better university which to me is characterized by the spirit of mental research. We have the research spirit in the faculty and the day when it comes to the student body on that day $800,000 reward will come to its fruition in the 36 counties."

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Faculty and Students of the University of Oregon

We wish to take this, our last, opportunity of expressing our sincere appreciation of the courtesies and favors you have extended us during the past year.

Soon you shall leave on your summer vacation, a rest well earned by long tedious hours of work during the past months. We wish everyone a most pleasant vacation, full of rest and happiness, and trust that you will return next fall with renewed interest and enthusiasm for your work.

To those who graduate, we are thankful for the opportunity of having known you and sincerely hope that the future holds a reward for you worthy of your efforts during the past four years.

Handwritten signatures of faculty members.
