TWO BIG FOOTBALL GAMES BOOKED FOR EUGENE NEXT YEAR

Hayward Field To Be Scene Of Clashes With Idaho And Washington

The University of Oregon will open the 1920 football season with Idaho on Hayward field, October 23, according to Marion F. McClain, graduate manager of athletics. The schedule now complete, except for the arranging of one or two practice games earlier in the season, calls for three Pacific Coast and one Northwest Conference games next season, and one game with the University of Southern California in Los Angeles on Thanksgiving day. In addition practice games with Willamette University and Multnomah club may be played, McClain said.

On October 30, one week after the opening game, the team will play Stanford in Palo Alto. This will be Oregon's first football game against Leland Stanford University. With one week of rest intervening the Varsity will meet the University of Washington on Hayward field, November 13. Oregon's Homecoming Day. The last game of the conference season will be staged with the Aggies in Corvallis on November 20. This classic contest which each year draws hundreds of football fans from all over Oregon is to be staged on O. A. C.'s Homecoming Day. On November 25, Thanksgiving day, "Shy's" warriors will renew their acquaintance with the southland when they meet the University of Southern California in Los Angeles.

Idaho can be looked to this year to furnish some real thrills in the Northwest conference, Manager Mc-

Bill Steers, pilot of 1920 eleven, selected as all-coast quarter this year.

Clain declares. He bases his confidence in their strength in their acquisition of Coach Kelley, team mate of Hugo Bezdek at the University of Chicago, and since noted for his work as assistant coach at the University of Missouri and coach of the University of Georgia. Kelley was one of the greatest football men of his time and is practically certain to put Idaho strongly in the running for conference honors, McClain thinks.

The football schedule this year can be banked on as being one of the greatest money makers in Oregon's athletic history, Manager McClain

TRACK DOPE LEAVES OREGON WITH GOOD PROSPECTS FOR 1921

Wonderful Victory At Pullman Encourages Fans Over Next Year's Prospects

Oregon has just finished a successful track season, and the dopsters are already turning to next year's prospects. The climax of the season was the wonderful victory at Pullman, when Oregon won the Northwest Conference championship.

Bill Hayward and every other track enthusiast believes that Oregon will have a mighty good track team next year. Bill says, as he always does, that the most important thing is "to get men who will work, and train all during the season." The loss of "Hank" Foster will be keenly felt, but if the men will give Bill all they have, he is of the opinion that a good, strong team can be built up in the other departments. Bill Hayward does not win the meets by records, he wins by getting the men to follow his instructions—and by hard-working athletes.

Next year Hayward will have a bunch of good frosh to assume varsity places. Collins will be a sensation if he will only train, and work for Hayward. Of course, Arthur Tuck will be a shining light, and Tuck has a good chance to make himself famous, "Ole" Larson, and Del Oberteuffer both look like they had the ability. Under Bill's guidance these men should pull Oregon through a wonderful year.

Carl Knudsen a Good Prospect. Carl Knudsen is going to be one of the mainstays in the coming year. His work this year in the hurdles indicated his ability, and Bill is looking

BASEBALL PROSPECTS FOR NEXT YEAR LOOK BRIGHT FOR OREGON

Strong Trio of Veteran Pitchers Will Bolster Team; Lind's Shoes Hard To Fill

With all but two members of the 1920 team eligible for next year, varsity baseball prospects look exceedingly bright. Shy will not be without troubles, however, for the graduation of Jay Fox and Captain Herm Lind will leave two big holes in the infield. Both men added lots of pep and ginger to the team, and Lind will be an especially hard man to replace for he was a mighty slugger in addition to being a consistent player in the field. Other vacancies may appear before next season opens, however, and it is not certain that either Bill Steers or Spike Leslie will be back to play. Steers was a sure man in center field and both he and Spike ranked high among the sluggers. Spike was rapidly developing into a star received too, and was working smoother every game the varsity played. Some of the heaviest hitters from this year's freshman team will have to be relied on in case Bill Steers is not back. Either Vince Jacobberger or Pink Manerud may be developed into a varsity catcher if Leslie is not on hand.

Many Will Fight for Infield. First base will be the greatest problem for Shy to work on. Ralph Smith of this year's freshman team or Ducky Holmes of the same aggregation may be able to handle it. The other infield vacancy will be at third. Houston, Liebe, Black, Collins and Beller, subs this year, may all be candidates for the position. Hugh Jacobberger of the freshman team may have a chance at an infield position too, for he shows real class as a ball player. Skeet Manerud is almost a sure bet at short as he has held down his position with room to spare.

Pitcher will be where Shy has no worries in case all of his prospects return. Berg, Jacobberger and Jacobson, all veterans of this year's team, will make a formidable combination for any conference team to face. In addition he will have Shim and Knud-

OREGON BASKETBALL FIVE'S RECORD GOOD AND OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Recognition Again Given By Choice of Varsity Men On All-Star Teams

The placing of more Oregon men on the mythical quintets than from any other colleges goes to prove that the Oregon basketball team was one of the fastest in the conferences in spite of the fact the lemon-yellow hoopers did not bring home the championship to Eugene. Eddie Durno, captain-elect of next year's quintet, has for two years been chosen on the all-coast five! Nish Chapman, Oregon's famous guard was selected on the Northwest team. Herm Lind, captain of this year's crew, graduates this year. The big "lefty" alternated between forward and center the past season and held both positions in a masterful way. Lind finished his third consecutive year on the varsity basketball team. Francis Beller played guard on the quintet. It was his first year on the five, but he played his position like a veteran at the game. He was sure in his passing and had lots of fight. Francis Jacobberger is one of the old-timers on the team and he played his position at guard with an ease that was puzzling to his opponents. Jake had a happy faculty of being just in the right place at the right time. Skeet Manerud broke into the game after he had finished a heavy season of football. Oregon's diminutive forward took to basketball just like football and finished up his athletic career this year by playing shortstop on the varsity nine and throwing the javelin for Bill once in awhile for exercise.

To the Students of the University of Oregon

By this means wish to congratulate you on the splendid success of the campaign for the millage bill, and to express my appreciation of the whole-hearted and untiring way in which you gave your best efforts for the success of the measure. The victory is, in large measure, yours, and so, in even larger measure, will the fruits of the victory be yours. It will mean a new "Oregon"; and it is casting no disparagement on the University of the past to say that the new, as it emerges from the old, will be not only a larger but a better University.

In our natural elation over the outcome of the campaign, with all that it means in the way of growth, development and improvement, let us not lose sight of the fact every new privilege carries with it a new responsibility; and in granting us this very large increase in the funds which sustain the University, the people of the state are, at the same time, expecting more of us. The large amount of publicity given this institution, in connection with the campaign, has focussed public attention on it as never before. And that attention, kindly in the main, but not without the possibility of criticism, will be attracted to you, the students of the University. When you go to your home communities for the summer vacation, you will be observed as representative products of the University of Oregon. What you say and do and are will be considered as evidences of the effect upon you of your college experience. With that thought in your mind—the thought that your college is being judged through you—you can hardly do other than hold yourselves to a standard of conduct worthy of "Oregon."

The millage bill victory is nothing less than a great vote of confidence on the part of the people in the efficiency of higher education. As such it should—and will—beget a new pride, a new dignity, a new loyalty. The achievements of "Oregon" have been due largely to the united loyalty of her students and friends. May the new and larger University never lack that united loyalty! Given that, and with the new and broad opportunities now made clear for us, there is no attainment beyond our reach.
