OLD OREGON SPIRIT.

The dream of a Greater Oregon is coming true. New buildings are springing up on the campus, and a larger and more complete teaching staff has been provided. Courses of study have been amplified; better laboratory equipment is on hand, while indications point to the largest enrollment in the history of the University. The voters of the state provided the money for the building program which will give our college a group of buildings compared to those of any western university. Faculty and students alike are filled with ambition to make our University one of the greatest, and if possible the greatest, in the country.

With this in mind, let us not forget to keep alive the spirit of democracy on the campus. Ever since the University was founded this democratic spirit has pervaded its social life. It has become one of the most cherished traditions of the student body.

The mere mention of the Oregon spirit kindles the eyes of the old students, puts more pep into them, and creates a profound feeling of collegiate patriotism. As a great wave is made up of many drops of water, so is "Oregon Spirit" composed of the individual loyalty of the many students.

"Helle" is the spoken symbol of the democratic spirit. This greeting between students is certainly better than the cursory glance, the glassy stare, the aloof passby, or the curt nod. According to college traditions "hello" is to be exchanged between all students at all times when meeting on the campus or in the downtown district.

The larger the enrollment of students, the more danger that this spirit of democracy will gradually disappear. There is danger that groups may become so engrossed in themselves and their own plans and pleasures that they will lose their sense of fellowship with the other students. Such a state of affairs would quickly result in the loss of public confidence, for the voters of the state expect, and even demand, that the democratic spirit be maintained on the campus. We cannot, must not, and will not fail to maintain this spirit.

A great many people are doing a rushing business these days.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION SCHOOL WILL EXPAND

Dr. John Bovard, Dean, Plans to Strengthen Department

With the opening of the University this year, the school of physical education takes its rank with the major departments on the campus.

Dr. John F. Bovard has been placed at the head of the physical education department, and as it's dean is planning the extension of the work in many fields.

The plan as announced is to enlarge the scope of the physical education department so that it includes what is practically equivalent to a normal course for men. It is planned to prepare students for positions as physical educators throughout the country.

"Due to the laws in eight states requiring physical education in the high schools, there has been a tremendous demand for physical trainers," said Dr. Bovard. "New York state alone, has placed 8,000 men, with the result that there has been a shortage of men to engage in this work."

The physical education major, which is open to all students irrespective of class, offers either a B. A. or A. B. degree. It provides for basic work in such subjects as personal hygiene, biology and anatomy. Dr. Bovard has combined with his department the governmental work of the department of hygiene.

Dr. Bertha Stuart Dymont has been engaged by the department and will act as women's medical adviser. She will also have charge of several physical education classes.

G. B. Bohler, of Fairmont, West Virginia, has been engaged to instruct men's classes on the gymnasium floor. Mr. Bohler is an athlete of considerable repute, having played upon the "all-eastern" basketball team.

So far there have been two kinds of freshmen seen on the campus. They are the green and the bright green. The paradoxical part of it is that the plain green are usually conceded to be brighter than the "bright" green.

Frosh Darkhorse To Fill Ballot in Friday's Elections

Strange as it may seem, the freshman political pot fails to boil. However, prospects point to a lively time this afternoon at the first great get-together of the knights of the green cap.

To date no names have been mentioned for the high honor of chief water-carrier, but of course office seekers are keeping in the background until the meeting Friday. Then they will trot forth with all their high school valor and some green horse will walk away with the honor.

All upper classmen are much interested in the Frosh voting riot, the Sophomores having gone so far in their enthusiasm as to promise a reception or something to the winner.

GIRLS PAID TRIBUTE

Returning Y. W. Secretary Lauds American Women

Miss Tirza Dinsdale Back After Year and a Half Work Done in Italy

"My strongest impression on getting home to the United States and back to the Oregon campus," said Miss Tirza Dinsdale Y. W. C. A. secretary, "is of the self-reliance and executive ability of our girls, and of our material wealth and abundance of opportunity." Miss Dinsdale declares that one of her main reasons in wanting to return to the Y. W. C. A. work at Oregon was to help give the girls an idea of the opportunity for leadership that is now open to American women because they have native ability in the direction of executive work, and because their training in school and in the business world develops this gift.

The contrast between a cabinet meeting of the University Y. W. C. A. and the attitude of a group of Italian college girls is most striking, says Miss Dinsdale. She spent the last six months of her year and a half stay abroad working on the housing and social problems that have arisen since the Italian women have started attending universities and have gone into business. There, as elsewhere, during the war it was necessary for women to work outside the home and the problems that grew out of this condition were so well recognized, that the Italian government asked the American Y. W. C. A. to help them. The number of college women is as yet very small. At the university of Naples out of seven thousand students, only three hundred twenty-one were women. The prejudice against women in business is great, and a girl lowers herself socially when she goes into office work.

At the universities, says Miss Dinsdale, there was no social life or groups of girls working together. The Y. W. C. A. organized clubs at the schools and among the business women. These women who are going out into the world there are leaders, declares Miss Dinsdale, and they are very anxious to become efficient and independent and they are looking toward the American girl for their example.

The American Y. W. C. A. now has six centers in Italy from which they work. There are 44 nations who have Y. W. C. A. organizations, with headquarters in London. The work of the American Y. W. in France during the war was so effective that the Italian government asked their help in solving its after-the-war problems in connection with women in industry and schools.

During the first six months of her stay abroad Miss Dinsdale was stationed at Brest, where the Y. W. C. A. had entire responsibility for taking care of the war brides of American soldiers returning home. About two thousand passed through the camp. Miss Dinsdale declares, and the problems arising in connection with housing them properly, getting their passports, and taking care of them in general, were so many and so varied that they could not be enumerated. They gave dances, to which the husbands were invited, had moving pictures, and conducted classes in English. The problem of taking care of the war brides was one of the unexpected phases of the war, says Miss Dinsdale, and one for which no provision had been made by the military authorities. When the time came for the soldiers to return the problem immediately came to the front, and it was through the Y. W. C. A. it was successfully dealt with.

NEW INSTRUCTOR HERE

William Michael to Succeed Professor Robert W. Prescott.

William Michael, of Champaign, Ill., has accepted the position at the University lately held by Professor Robert W. Prescott in the department of Public Speaking. Mr. Michael was a student at the University of Illinois and was graduated there in 1920. He majored in English and represented Illinois in the collegiate debate against Wisconsin last year. He was at the head of the list for recommendation at the University of Wisconsin.

Mr. Michael was under contract to teach at Cornell this year but came here upon the resignation of Professor Prescott.

terest in all student body affairs."

Constant and prompt attendance at all student body assemblies is urged upon the students by President Savage, who declared that by means of these weekly gatherings of the students the initial pep and enthusiasm can be stimulated and maintained throughout the year.

Announcement of the names of the new members of the Forensic council and the Social Affairs committee and also the appointment of three members to fill vacancies on the student council, were made by the new president.

The three vacancies on the student council were caused by the non-return to college of Wanda Brown, Kate Chat-

Registration, combined with rush week, generally leaves one with a feeling of bewilderment, and a feeling of lassitude towards work. But the first week often shapes future college career of a student, and old students must be careful to impress upon their fellows that real work is to follow during the year.

Monday and Tuesday of this week were given over to registration, and today the majority of the students, new and old, should have completed their matriculation. Today regular University work begins, and classes will be held for the first time. It is just as important to attend classes on the opening day as to register, if one wishes to get properly started on the year's work. The time for loafing has passed; the time for real work is here.

One thing which must be remembered is the goal which you are seeking in college. You are here for an education—not a degree. A degree is not always the reward of honest study, but an education always is. Your pleasures and ambitions must be subservient to the higher goal. Start today and work honestly and diligently towards the goal of a real education.

The friendly co-operation existing between the citizens of Eugene and the University is a matter of great pride to Oregon students. This year, with a serious housing problem confronting the University, Eugene citizens opened their homes to accommodate the influx, so that the young people of the state might continue their education.

Much credit is due the campus Christian organizations for the directing of new students to the campus from the trains, and for assisting them to obtain rooms and work for the year. The student who took the College Crest car to the campus this year is yet to be heard from.

It may be because of the H. C. of L. but it is very noticeable that junior cords are very much in evidence about the campus, while senior sombreros are seldom seen. And speaking of sombreros, the little green ones are beginning to appear.
