SAY "HELLO"

If an old Oregon student should pass an unfamiliar freshman on Hello Lane without greeting him it would at once be a disregard for one of Oregon's oldest traditions and a desecration of her democratic name. And yet it is done.

Every time this duty is neglected Oregon Spirit suffers. It is the common interests of the students that form the basis of college activities; everything hinges on the individual relationship. A total of persons and personal things is what Oregon is, and Oregon Spirit, after all, is merely a summation of individual interests and aspirations. Oregon cannot reach its utmost possibilities or realize the brightest promises of a Greater Oregon unless these mutual interests be thorough and sincere with everyone. It calls for a mutual understanding which is thorough; it calls for a general feeling of good fellowship, for common purposes. No one can understand a stranger, hence the University must contain no strangers, no one to hang back as a dead weight because every pulse cannot beat in unison and feel as the rest — because it cannot know the thrill of true Oregon Spirit.

Oregon has long been a great school; it is rapidly becoming a big one. A danger threatens—may not Oregon some day go the way of many large institutions, may not her Spirit be swallowed up by mere bigness? In days gone by Oregon has upheld her name among colleges of several times her size, because, though out-numbered, Oregon was unified while the others were not. It was a case of circumstances, because she was small Oregon was drawn together, because others were large their interests tended to fall apart.

As Oregon grows she must be held together. And Hello Lane with its traditions is one big factor that can do this. No matter how many the newcomers are, they cannot always remain strangers if, day in and day out, they are greeted with a hearty "hello" about the campus. If this habit has lagged in the last few years it is time to stimulate it again before it is too late.

Oregon must not be lax in safeguarding the Oregon Spirit, she must not forget her democracy nor neglect her traditions, she must not fail to say "hello."

A good step was taken by the Student Council when it voiced its disapproval of promiscuous soliciting of downtown merchants for advertising to support calendars, blotters, telephone directories, and such unessentials for use of students of the University. If such printed articles are found to be necessary to students, they should be sold to them, not given away at the expense of Eugene business men. Usually the promoter of such schemes makes a sizable share of money for himself, and pays but little attention to the advertisers who made the scheme a reality. The students of the University cannot afford to antagonize in any way the business men who have helped the University in every crisis.

"CO-OP" STORE TO FILL STUDENT NEEDS

Books and Supplies Sold on Profit Sharing Basis

Every student body member a "Co-op" member is the plan of the University student's supply store, the "Co-op", which has opened on the corner of 13th and Kincaid. Although the store has been in operation for only a few days the results are very encouraging according to Carl Newbury, a member of the board of directors of the store.

The sale of membership tickets is in progress. These one dollar membership tickets are on sale at the "Co-op" and in the Administration building.

Graduate Manager McClain, who is also manager of the "Co-op", in speaking of the store said that it was the intention of the directors to attempt to fill every need which the students on the campus might feel in the way of supplies and books. In this way the store will be much more than just a University book store. This cannot be done until the students really get back of the movement. Manager McClain went on to say, but in time it will be possible to carry it out.

Students All Stockholders.

The "Co-op" is run by Manager McClain on a co-operative basis declaring dividends. There are five directors from the student body and two from the faculty. Every student who buys a membership ticket becomes a stockholder with the right to buy supplies and at the end of the year dividends are declared on the profits. With every purchase made at the store a slip is given and these are to be turned in in order that the amount of the purchases may be ascertained at the end of the year. All books and other supplies that are needed for work in the University will be furnished at a reasonable cost, thus making a distinct saving for the student.

First "Co-op" in 1911.

This movement for a store run by the student body that shall fill the needs of the students is not new this year. Beginning in 1911 and for the following five years the University book store was in the basement of the library, under the direction of M. H. Douglas. President Campbell and Mr. Douglas guaranteed this project so that the students might obtain their books at a reasonable cost. In 1916 the business grew too large and a "Co-op" store was started which was somewhat similar in purpose and organization to the present one. This store was in operation until the spring of 1918 when it was decided to sell out. This decision was not due to financial failure for at the end of these two years $500 clear profit was turned over to the student body by Manager McClain. It was because, due to the war, other student body activities were going in the hole, and it was thought best to take the money out of the store and put it into them. At the time the store was sold an agreement was made that it would stay out of business for two years. The two years are up and the second "Co-op" is now in running order.

THE FORUM

STUDENT LABOR.

To the Emerald:—In every university or college there are a number of students who must depend upon outside work to help pay their expenses at school and the University of Oregon is apparently no exception to this rule. The University through its Y. M. C. A. is conducting without charge an employment agency for students. Every effort is being made to secure employment for the men but the demand has so far exceeded the available jobs.

This condition brings about a sort of competition among students who must earn their expenses and for this reason student labor becomes cheap. This is partly the fault of the students themselves who are willing to work for very low wages. In other universities a uniform wage scale is established and the students abide by it and therefore the public cannot impose upon them.

Not so in Eugene. Students who must work are imposed upon too easily. It is only fair to say that this state of affairs exists because there is not a definite understanding as to what shall constitute a reasonable wage for working students. If such a wage could be agreed upon among the students no one would have the impudence to offer them five dollars a month for working two hours every day. This is only a sample of some of the jobs listed this year. Such offers are an insult to self-respecting students who must work their way through school. But after all this matter would seem to rest with the working students themselves.

WORK BEING RUSHED ON NEW DORMITORY

Second of Residence Halls to Be Ready by January.

The new hall of residence for University women will in all probability be ready for occupancy by January, according to Dean Elizabeth Fox.

"Hendricks hall," said Miss Fox, "is the first of the University's residence system for women. When the hall was outgrown, cottages were used as annexes, but now we are looking forward to the completion of the new hall." The organization this year is along the lines of a permanent residence scheme. Several halls of residence with a head resident in each is the plan, stated Miss Fox.

"We hope to be able eventually to house the University women in halls on the general plan of Hendricks hall," further stated Miss Fox, "although it will be several years before it will be possible to entirely do away with the smaller residences."

The new hall is being built on the same plan as Hendricks hall except that the dining room will be omitted. A committee of the board of regents has been appointed to choose a name for the building.

JANET YOUNG IS STAR

Graduate Opens Theatrical Season In Salt Lake.

Miss Janet Young, formerly University of Oregon student in dramatics, opened the winter season this year in Salt Lake City playing in Thomas' "Witching Hour." Miss Young, whose home is in Portland, has just completed a national tour with the Ellison-White Chautauque company in "Kindling." She was one of three starred on Broadway last winter by Maurice Brown when she appeared in "The Medea."

STYLE HEADQUARTERS Where Society Brand Clothes are sold

Society Brand Clothes

HITTING THE FALL STYLE TARGET

Watch the coat room boy. Even he judges men by their clothes. Notice how he jumps around when a man with well tailored clothes hands him a check.

That is the story of Society Brand Clothes. They command respectful and serious attention. They are dignified in cut without being old and they are alert and youthful in style without being too young looking.

Styles this Fall are different. Coats are ample and spacious for the pinched-in effect has gone. So has the long vent. We want to show you the fall models in Society Brand Suits and Coats. You will appreciate their superiority.
