KEEP THE TERM PLAN.

At a meeting of the faculty next Thursday the question of whether the University will continue on its present term basis or return to the old semester plan will be discussed and definite action probably taken. It seems highly improbable, however, that the faculty will take final action on any such matter without consulting the students, for they are the ones to be most directly affected.

It seems incredible that anyone should want the University to return to the old semester plan when everything seems to be moving so smoothly under the present system. No one can deny that there have been fewer students dropping out in the middle of the term. Under the semester plan, when each period lasted four months, University records will show that the list of students who found it necessary to drop work and lose credits they might have made during the period, was much larger than it is at present when the terms are short enough to allow everyone to finish the full quarter's work before leaving.

That argument alone should convince the most enthusiastic to get down to work in time for examinations is advanced only under the old plan. Vacations come just at the close of each term, when they should, and but few complaints have been heard concerning the breaking up of work under the present term plan.

The argument that the periods are too short to enable anyone to get down to work in time for examinations is advanced only by those who would be unable to buckle down to real work a week before examinations, anyway. Too frequent examinations is another argument of the semester backers. But if these men would realize that examinations under the semester plan, while not so frequent, cover one-third more ground as term examinations, and are just so much harder, they would realize their mistake. Besides, there are no vacations immediately following exams in which to recuperate, as at present.

Practically all of the younger western universities of the small progressive type are run under the term plan. Older, conservative institutions still retain the semester arrangement. Oregon is not ashamed to be linked with the former institutions in this way. Oregon is young, small, progressive and western. Oregon wants to retain the term plan.

MONDAY MORNING AND THE WOMEN

Oregon Spirit demands many things. Monday morning it demands that every student meet at the library to greet the returning Oregon football team, who arrive in Eugene on an early train. Win or lose, you can't beat Oregon fight, and in spite of the lure of the downy, there is no doubt that every student will want to show Oregon's fighting warriors that they are behind them.

Oregon Spirit demands something else. It demands not only that every man and woman in school turn out for a rally, but actually take part in it. In the two downtown rallies that have been staged this year, University women have taken part. And yet on both occasions, scores of women have lined the sidewalk watching their friends give a real demonstration of Oregon Spirit. Such action is nothing less than contemptible! If every woman in school followed the example of the high-and-mighty scoffers who choose the sidewalks in preference to the spirit of the rest of the gang, where would Oregon Spirit be?

Monday morning every man and woman in school will be at the depot when the Oregon team arrives. And when the "Thundering Thousand" start toward the campus, no high-and-mighty clique of women are going to make a laughing stock of Oregon Spirit!

A club for men who are wholly or partially self-supporting has been organized on the campus, first steps toward that end having been taken last Thursday at 4:15 p. m. An organization of such character should prove to be a success, and should prove to be of material aid to the great number of men working their way through school. But it seems as though the very men who should be members of the organization were intentionally left out, as the first meeting of the club was called at an hour when most of the self-supporting men were very much engaged in the art of self-support. Practically one-half of the men in the University are earning their way through school more or less, and a few men should not set themselves up as the only working men in the University.

Announcements

Freshmen—The freshmen will meet at the "Y" but on Saturday morning to make arrangements for securing wood for the frosh bonfire. All men of '24 are asked to be out.

Bonfire Committee—All frosh bonfire committees will meet at the "Y" but at 9 a. m. Saturday morning.

LOST—Pair of glasses in black case, on campus. Phone 1355-R. Sue Stewart.

JOURNALISM LOTTERY POSTED

The lottery list for the Journalism party is posted on the "Shack" bulletin board. It is very important for the men to look up their names and phone the girl as soon as possible, according to the committee. If for any reason either one cannot go, the other is privileged to ask some one else.

The jamboree will include all Journalism students and those taking short-story writing. The party is to be held Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock in the Men's Gym.

filled before making out our own. Fancy dancing is to be discouraged, as the floor will be too crowded for such.

Admission to the dance will be $1, excepting alumni, who will be admitted free.

Tickets Now Ready.

As soon as a house knows how many guests they are to have, the tickets for the dance can be obtained. The head of the house will write the guests' names on the ticket and the name of the house on the back. No O. A. C. nor University of Washington guests are to have these tickets.

By way of advertisement, slides have been made and are being shown in every movie in the state. Also posters have been sent out advertising the week-end. This coming week-end individual write-ups of different people will appear in the various papers about the state.

Tags are to be worn by every one in order that they may be recognized. The "alums" will wear brown tags, while the students will be decorated with red tags. This will enable the guests to distinguish the students from the alumni.

Rooters Section Reserved.

It was announced that any "alum" wishing to sit in the rooters' section of the grand stand need not make reservations ahead of a seat, but may get one when they enter the field. Sections will be reserved in the grand stand for alumni, University of Washington people and students.

The campus Y. W. C. A. is canvassing every house selling chrysanthemums for the game. It is urged that as many as possible get these flowers and wear them; it makes a good effect in the grand stand. The student council went on record to spend $40 for the decorating of the women's section of the grand stand. A yellow "O" will be formed by the girls in the grand stand. The slogan "Can't beat Oregon fight" was chosen for the week-end. And the "Winnagen" is to be sent out this Saturday to every alumnus in the state.

Luncheon Is Planned.

Efforts are now under way to try to get the men of the University to help finance the campus luncheon. It has always been the custom to tax every girl on the campus for this affair, but as they are also taxed for the junior week-end luncheon, they feel the men should assist in one or the other.

Students are urged to use the Homecoming stickers to a larger extent, stated Houston. Many have bought them but have not used them, it seems, so every one who has not bought any yet are asked to and all are asked to use them on the backs of their letters.

Hopes for a larger band were made known last night and Wayne Akers urges all men who played on the band last year to turn out and help at this time. Uniforms may be obtained from the R. O. T. C., he said.

The last meeting of the Homecoming week-end committee is to be the Tuesday before the week-end and every member must be present at that time. According to Carlton Savage, many members of this committee have been sluffing lately and it will take the co-operation and earnest work of every student to put this week-end over the way it should be done.

INFIRMARY HOURS LIMITED

Students who wish to call at the University infirmary, have been requested by Dr. Sawyer to be more careful in observing the clinic hours of 9:30 till 11 a. m., and 1:30 till 4 p. m. "Of course," he stated, "in emergencies and under certain circumstances which make it very inconvenient for students to come at the regular hours, they will be given attention if necessary when they come. However, in many cases it is just carelessness which makes the students call at irregular hours. As a special favor Dr. Sawyer asks that more attention be paid to this matter by the students.

hart; halfbacks, Steers and Hill; fullback, King.

Line-up of Cardinal.

Stanford will in all probability line up as follows: Ends, Pelouze and Adams; tackles, McAlpine and Pershing; guards, Cravens and Deems; center, Righter; quarterback, Schlaudermann; halfbacks, Campbell and Arnett; fullback, Templeton.

The addition of "Dink" Templeton to the Stanford line-up will mean a big factor in Coach Powell's aggregation, especially when it comes to kicking the oval. "Dink" has a reputation for being in "Bill" Steers' class when it comes to punting and it will be necessary to keep him a safe distance from the goal posts. Powell is figuring on Templeton's toe aiding him in beating the northern invaders.

Steers' Leg Bothers.

"Bill" Steers has been having a little trouble with his leg that was injured in the Idaho game, but it is highly probable that he will be in fit shape to do the punting in the game this afternoon. The exchange of punts between Steers and Templeton will be a feature of the game.

The one other big contest in the Pacific Coast Conference football schedule for today will be played at Corvallis this afternoon between the Oregon Aggies and the University of California gridsters. Much interest is centering on this contest and over 200 students from Oregon are planning on attending the game. Graduate Manager McClain has made special seating arrangements for the contest and the Oregon fans who attend will have a special section. Yell Ledger Keeney will be on hands to lead the Oregon yells as the returns of the Oregon-Stanford game are received.

The Aggies are weakened by the loss of "Gap" Powell, their big backfield star, but they are determined to give the bears a hard come. Coach Smith and 23 members of the southern team arrived in Albany yesterday and will go on to Corvallis this morning.

Idaho Meets Whitman.

The University of Idaho eleven tangles with the Whitman College aggregation this afternoon and the strong Washington State College team will meet Montana.
