STOP THE CHEATER.

Because the School of Commerce rejected the honor system that some desired to have inaugurated there, it does not mean, as some seem to think, that cheating is lightly regarded among the students or that they have a distorted moral sense in the matter. It merely means that they expressed their opinion regarding the proposed honor system. And their attitude is without doubt a fair index to the attitude of the students as a whole.

After all, the term "honor system" is somewhat of a misnomer. Rather, it is an Honor Spirit, a thing which comes from within, a thing that is not subject to systematization, that is wanted here. No student could bring himself to "sneak" on his fellow, as the system provides, with any degree of ease or grace. Certainly in its broadest sense, there is no honor in anything which would bind a student to do that which his instinct would tell him not to do, a thing against which a normal conscience would rebel.

But the student body has a right to protect itself against its component members. When someone cheats he receives a grade which he does not merit, and he robs his fellow of the relative distinction that would come if the whole affair had been on the square. The student who cheats is a thief, who would steal from his University. If there is cheating on the campus now, the ultimate aim of every loyal student should be to stamp it out. If a Mightier Oregon is to be realized, if the standards of the school are to be the highest, it must be done with all surety, and if the cry "go slow" has been uttered, it does not mean that the starting point should be put off.
