THE EFFECT OF THE MILLAGE BILL.

What is being done with the money the University is receiving through the millage tax?
What is the cost of the new buildings being erected on the campus?
What new buildings are planned for the future?
What increase has been made in the faculty of the University?
What does the new school of physical education plan to do?
What is being done to make Oregon the athletic headquarters of the west?
What is the change made in Oregon's scholastic policy?
What is the aim of the college of literature, science and the arts?
What does the school of commerce plan to make of its graduates?
What is the standing of Oregon graduates in technical and professional schools throughout the country?
What is the function of those departments of the University whose work is off the campus?
What is the University doing for the citizens of the state?
You who have helped the University in the recent millage tax bill campaign—have you ever wondered what you have done for your University? Have you—any of you—ever asked yourself any of the above questions? Have you ever wondered about the future of the University?
Any one of the questions listed above has doubtless occurred to all of us at one time or another. All of them, and many more are answered in a story written for the Emerald by Raymond Lawrence, which appears in this issue. A great deal of work has been required in the preparation of this story, which was intended to furnish the readers of the Emerald with all the facts concerning the activities of the University since the passage of the millage bill. It is a story which is well worth reading, well worth remembering, and well worth keeping for future reference.

The All-University men's smoker, which will be introduced at Oregon this year, is an institution which has proven successful at several other colleges and universities throughout the country. It makes for a democratic spirit among the men. As the April Frolic has proven a success, so will the All-University men's smoker—provided it has everyone's support.

Let's not forget the old Oregon "Hello" tradition. Speak to your fellow-students! Say Hello!

The Campus Cynic

SOPHOMORIC INTELLECTS.

To the Editor:
Ah! (We people with sophomore intellects consider this a crushing rejoinder.) Ah! I have stepped on someone's feet. It suddenly occurs to me that I might soliloquize on those feet. "Wee timorous beastie." But that won't do. They're probably not at all "wee." (It's evident that I'm sparring for time. Sophomore brains are like limited trains; they run in sections with no connections.) However, be those feet large or small supporting man or woman, crowned with faculty kelly or freshman cupola of green, I'm surely sorry that I offended your recondite taste.
Won't you forgive me? From the lofty eminence of your humanitarian viewpoint and in the great goodness of your heart, don't judge too harshly. — I who grovel at your feet, plead.
From your elevated position, gazing on all humanity with kindly, understanding eyes, I know that our puny efforts here below must seem so pitifully futile to you; and that our dabbling in the dust and mud of this ignominious life-like small children making mud pies must seem to your omniscient and immaculate person a drab, dirty performance. But we are only human. Surely you will consider that. How was I to know, when I entered, with such asinine tenacity, the office of Cynic of Things, that there you were, calm and serene, towering above me — an infinitely greater judge of Things? How was I to know?? You never gave us any intimation of your presence. Of course I understand how you dislike to dabble in the earthly muck, thereby running the risk of soiling your hands, and that you did do so this once, though disinclined, only in order that I may be gently but firmly put aright.

Oh, believe me, generous benefactor, I am a naughty, bad, bold boy. Now, having been chastised by you, won't you let me come and sit at your feet and list the parable of wisdom after you? Let me come and learn from you how never to speak unless spoken to; to turn the other cheek, not once, but in rapid succession; to carry mine eyes on the ground meekly; to reverse every pair of pants that proclaims itself engaged in the "Up-life;" to realize how hopelessly commonplace and provincial those of us are who do not announce themselves a part of some "urge" or other; and how ignorant we appear, unless we recite the utter wrongness of the man-made part of the world, and shout from the housetops the one and only panacea—discovered by us. "P" and "V" and "S", don't in your appointed task of dragging us out of the pools of iniquity and gently and firmly setting us on the right road — don't lose patience. Consider me, the Cynic as a pestiferous mosquito. Surely, for the sake of your cause, you can endure a few mosquito bites—of such stuff are martyrs made. Glory in mosquito bites! Be glad that the lovely mosquito

WHAT THE OLD GRADS ARE DOING.

Vera Moffat, a graduate of the school of physical education in 1915, was one of those industrious girls who "literally live in the gym department," said Miss Cummings, head of the department and it would seem from her present position that her diligence brought ample returns. She taught at Ashland first, later at The Dalles, and is now head of the department of physical education at the Belingham State Normal in Washington. Miss Moffat recently refused an offer of a $3000 a year position as a community leader of physical education in one of our western cities because she felt that she could be of more service where she is.

SWEETSER TO SPEAK TONIGHT.

Professor A. R. Sweetser will give the first of a series of illustrated lectures tonight at 7:15 in Deady hall. The series is called "Medical Missions" and will consist of six lectures, to be given every week until completed. Both men and women are invited to attend this lecture, which is a regularly scheduled course in the recently started "Y" school. Stereopticon slides will be used. The meeting will be held in the lecture room of the building and in accordance with the policy of the plan, will last only one hour.

considers you sufficiently plump to partake of. Even that insignificant insect has some discrimination, tho I'll admit he occasionally alights on some rather sparse subjects.

And, "DVS", when are you going to Kooflectan? And doesn't a college student ever have any sense? And also when you got personal and mentioned my being in the A. E. F., I wondered, DVS — I wondered.

INDUSTRIAL FORUM TO ORGANIZE TONIGHT

Object To Interest Girls In Labor Problems.

DR. ROBBINS IN CHARGE

Prominent Speakers Coming During the Year.

The Industrial Forum, the purpose of which is to interest every girl on the University campus in industrial problems and especially those girls intending to work this summer, will meet for the first time this evening at 7:30 in the Y. W. C. A. bungalow to organize.

These forums are being organized in all the colleges on the Pacific coast with some member of the economics department as sponsor. Dean E. C. Robbins will direct the forum here. The main object of these meetings is to gain a better knowledge of current events and to encourage active discussion of the prevailing conditions.

At each meeting two very brief papers will be read by different members of the forum. One paper will state things of interest that have been happening in the United States in relation to industry and the other paper will discuss conditions in foreign countries. This information will be secured from magazines such as The Survey, The Nation, New Republic, Life and Labor and others.

Prominent speakers will be obtained to address the forum according to Miss Tirza Dinsdale. Mr. Otto Hartwig, president of the federation of labor in Oregon, and Professor Coleman, now with the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, have already promised to speak at meetings in the spring. Both of these men have had wide experience in labor problems and are good speakers according to Miss Dinsdale.

Clara Taylor industrial worker in the northwest Y. W. C. A. field will also make another visit to the campus this spring and tell of the problems she has encountered in this country and in Russia where she spent some time as an industrial worker. Dr. Sherwood Eddy emphasized the importance of this movement when he was on the campus and according to Miss Dinsdale encouraged the students to attend these meetings.

There will be two brief papers given at the meeting this evening by Jessie Todd and B. S. Mittleman, who has worked in big industries and understands the conditions. The questions to be discussed at this meeting of the forum will be as follows: A statement of the various types of industry where women are employed; industrial partnership, corporations, monopolies and trust—discussion of the advantages and disadvantages to the laborers working in the large and small factories. Why is so much said today about absentee ownership? Discuss supervision—owner, superintendent and forelady.
