Evening Meeting at Y. M. Hut For Men Only.

The evening meeting of Fred B. Smith, vice president of the Johns-Manville Company, is to be for men only announced Hal Donnelly yesterday, complying with a personal request that Mr. Smith made by telephone late last night. The meeting will be in the "Y" hut at 7:15 and Mr. Smith will deliver his famous address on "The Strong Man." He addresses the assembly this morning on the "Greatest Problem in America Today" and a special group of men in the "Y" at 5.

Mr. Smith will arrive this morning from Seattle where he made a great impression on both students and faculty. It is said that he is a very tall and powerful man weighing about two hundred and fifty pounds, with bushy black hair and a knack of driving his points home with his forceful personality. The name of Fred B. Smith is known by a great many college men all over the United States for he has spoken to colleges and universities almost continually for the last twenty-five years, gaining and holding the distinction of the bestliked speaker to students. The following is a quotation from the Iowa State Student, the Iowa State University daily, in its story of the Smith meetings there recently, which were attended by twelve that nothing aside from war-time occasions ever impressed itself so deeply upon the sentiments of both faculty and student bodies. At the station, while waiting for his train to speed him back to New York, groups of students and faculty members stood about the big cruseries of addresses: 'Oh, that America Monday, Christmas vacation. had a thousand Fred B. Smiths."

ed, requiring a student to make so many scholarship points before graduation and requiring that a grade of five not count | toward the accumulation of these points is one of these. At present Stanford puts on probation and even expells students who do not come up to certain standards of scholarship.

As the colloquium is an unofficial faculty "debating society," no definite official action was taken.
