

200 CHILDREN PLAY SATURDAY MORNINGS

Playground Class Instructs In Many Sports.

SWIMMING POOL LIKED

3 Squads Compose Older Boys, Girls, Youngsters.

The Saturday morning class in practical playground supervision is proving extremely popular with the children of Eugene and the girls in the class almost have their hands full keeping more than 200 children happy. At nine o'clock they begin pouring into the building, all ages from kindergarten upwards eager for the games to begin.

The playground class is divided into squads, one for the bigger boys, one for the bigger girls and another for the little youngsters. The morning begins with setting-up exercises and gymnastics for all the children, after which they are divided into the groups, with the members of the playground class in charge. The older boys play basketball, have apparatus work and swimming. The older girls are given folk dancing, games and apparatus work, and the little tots singing games, and story telling.

The swimming pool proves to be the most popular with the older children. No less than 60 little girls were in at one time last Saturday, some swimming and diving like so many little mermaids, while others were keeping the four instructors busy teaching them this most popular sport. An equal number has lined up along the edge of the balcony watching the fun and eager to get a suit and join the fun.

Swimming is enjoyed as much by the older boys and remarks such as "Gee, Wish we could swim longer!" and "Isn't that a great pool!" are characteristic of the general feeling in regard to the new pool placed at their disposal Saturday mornings.

Last Saturday, Emma Jane Garbade was general supervisor and her squads were as follows: Older boys, Emma Jane Garbade, Grace Tigard, Lois Barnett, and Mildred Apperson; Older girls, Margaret Russell, Florence Furnset, Elsie Hildebrand and Echo Baldecree; Little tots, Myrtle Magegle, Eleanor Spall, Geneva Stebno and Alice Evans. Each Saturday the organization changes, giving each member of the class a chance to work with each different group.
