

200 TAKE GYMNASIUM IN CLASSWORK AT 4

Five Regular Courses Offered
Women Thrice a Week.

AIM OF WORK IS HEALTH

Equipment, Floors Superior in Woman's Building.

Five regular classes—freshman and sophomore gymnasium, corrective and remedial work and dancing and voluntary swimming accommodate more than 200 women three times a week at the four o'clock hour in the woman's building, according to Miss Mabel L. Cummings, head of the department. The provision for the handling of a large number of classes and special work best suited to health requirements of the individual is one of the greatest factors in making the women's building superior in indoor equipment.

"The chief interest of this department is centered in the health of the University women, rather than in gymnasium work for exhibition purposes," said Miss Cummings, "and, for our purpose the women's building excels anything I have seen at colleges and universities."

Five separate gymnasium floors make possible specialized physical training. The corrective and remedial floors, each 26 by 52 feet, can be thrown together into one large room, by means of folding doors. Here, the more specialized work, and treatment of individual cases is done under Miss Laura McAllister and Miss Harriet Thomson. Eight senior majors have special patients in the clinic, from four to six, as part of their training. Vivian Chandler, Ruth Wolff, Ollie Stoltenberg, Eva Kelly, Elizabeth London, Cecile Barnes and Maud Largent each care for one or more patients during the clinic hour. At the same time, Miss Thomson has a class in corrective work, in the corrective room.

Regular sophomore and freshman gymnasium classes, under Miss Emma Waterman and Ethel Murray, a senior major, are held in the outdoor and indoor gymnasiums, and Miss Catharine Winslow has a class in applied dancing in the small room adjoining the main floor. Lucile McCorkle, a senior, has charge of the swimming pool during the afternoons and a large number of women swim at that time, making the average of over two hundred for Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

The 180 dressing stalls and 80 showers with central control were also planned to facilitate the handling of a large number with the least possible confusion.
