

EUGENE ALL-STARS MEET WITH VARSITY IN THE SOCCER GAME

Coach Dymont of University Terms Contest Slow and Listless

TOWN PLAYERS GIVE SKILLED EXHIBITION

Oregon Gets Several Shots In Second Half But Fails to Score

The University soccer team was able to close a no defeat season by holding the Eugene all star team to a 0 to 0 tie in the game played here Saturday. Dean Colin V. Dymont of the University, who played with the town team characterized the game as being the second slowest contest he had ever witnessed. The chief bright spots in the game were the results of the skilled playing of Dymont, Twermoes, and the two Ford brothers for the town aggregation. There was a small crowd of spectators present, about one hundred in all.

"Hay" Schmeer, who alternated with "Hub" Jacobberger guarding the varsity goal, played his last game under Oregon colors Saturday afternoon. During his four years of soccer playing at the University, Schmeer saw his team go down to defeat but twice, the two victories won by O. A. C. in 1917. On both occasions the Ford brothers, playing on the Aggie team, the same two men who battered the varsity backs Saturday—were the players who shot the winning markers under the Oregon bars.

Goals Not In Danger.

Neither goal was seriously endangered during any part of the game. Twermoes, the Ford brothers and Peter Crockatt frequently advanced the ball within scoring distance, but failed to make a shot. The town team lost its best chance to score during the second half when Hugh and Neal Ford crossed each other after the ball had been advanced to a strategic point in front of the varsity goal. "Spike" Leslie, playing goal for the Eugene team, seldom got his hands on the ball.

During the last half the Oregon men pepped up a bit and took several shots, but not one passed through the goal to break the tie score. Tuerck, Byers, King, McPherson and Brogan started the game on the varsity forward line. Schmeer guarded the goal during the first half, but changed to a fullback position during the final period and gave the goal berth to H. Jacobberger. Capps, Staton and Dedman played in the varsity defense area.

Game Is Rough Contest.

The game was unusually rough and the numerous collisions and falls appeared to delight the spectators.

Few penalties were called, but the convex slope of Hayward field caused the ball to slide out of bounds frequently and further slowed up the contest by throw-ins.

Commenting on the listless exhibition of soccer, Coach Dymont of the varsity squad said that the game satisfied him in one respect, and that was, that he now knows that outside matches can be arranged with a city aggregation for practice games next fall. Neal Ford, captain of the Eugene all stars, a player who has taken part in contest at Oregon, Stanford and O. A. C., told Coach Dymont that with a little more persistent practice the Oregon men who played Saturday could be developed into a scientific soccer team.

FOUR LETTER MEN TO BE NUCLEUS

Many for Guard Positions.

Beller and Reinhart will probably both be on hand to battle it out for the guard berths, Beller with two years experience with the varsity quintet and Reinhart with one. From the second string squad will be Couch and Burnett, both of whom played a consistent game during the past season and may be expected to furnish stiff competition for another year, while from the frosh quintet will be Douglas, Hal Chapman and Black.

The guard positions will probably be the most hotly contested, for the work of the frosh guards, stood out as a feature in all the games which the first year men played during the past season, and Coach Bohler already has two strong understudies for the varsity five in Couch and Burnett who held down those positions this season.

With the close of the basketball season at hand, it is time that the all Pacific coast mythical quintet were chosen. Already one has been selected by Coach Edmundsen of the University of Washington, although if anything it is slightly partial to Washington, giving two Sun Dodgers a place on the five and mentioning the rest of them. In his selection, the Washington coach gives a place at one forward to Eddie Durmo, captain and high point man of the Oregon quintet.

Coach Bohler declined to select a mythical team when requested to by an Emerald writer last night. It is just as well for in the majority of cases where the coaches select the quintets they are apt to become over partial to the members of their own squads. It is expected that the most authentic selection will be made by "Doc" Bohler, of Washington State College, who receives the selections of the coaches of the various teams in the conference and makes his selection from these, giving the positions to the men who receive the greater number of votes.

May Rate Two All-Stars.

Captain Eddie Durmo is entitled to a place on the team for there can be no doubt that Durmo is the fastest little forward in the conferences. His size accounts for a great deal of his ability to dodge his adversaries and his unerring aim causes him to ring long baskets with almost uncanny regularity during the games. Some coaches who have witnessed Durmo play, call it luck, but anyone who has witnessed the diminutive Oregon forward do the same tricks in some seven or eight consecutive games are inclined to feel otherwise. Durmo's foul shooting ability was surpassed by no other player in the conference and this will make him a strong contender for the honors on the mythical five.

Should Oregon rate two men on the all conference selection it is probable that strong consideration will be given Francis Beller. Beller was one of the fastest guards in the conference this year, and was a strong factor in the team work of the Lemon-Yellow quintet. He proved an excellent offensive player as well as a bulwark on defense and scored a number of long shots during the season. In breaking up the passing of the opposing teams he showed unusual ability, his speed accounting for a great deal of this.

Credit Due Lathams.

Durno and Beller were the shining lights on the varsity quintet this season, there is no doubt, but credit is due to the Latham brothers and Chapman, and Reinhart at guards. "Hunk" Latham played a fine game at center, for his first year with the varsity regulars and proved a consistent scorer. He is good for a good jump at the tip off and his size stands him in hand when it comes to mixing with his adversaries. Marc Latham worked hard at standing forward, feeding the ball for the most of the shots to Durmo whose basket shooting was a little more sure. Marc had better success during the latter part of the season and only in the final games did he get his stride in basket shooting.

"Nish" Chapman played the fore part of the season at standing guard for the Oregon quintet, while "Bill" Reinhart handled the position the latter half of the winter schedule. Chapman was declared ineligible to play after the California games owing to his scholarship standings, although his work previous to that time showed him to be one of the strongest guards in the conferences. Chapman rated a place at all Northwest guard during the 1920 season and was going strong for the same position on the 1921 selection until his difficulty.

in a manner which made him one of the strongest characters in the cast. His clever acting served to bring a saving element of comedy into the play.

An interesting feature of the play was the acting of Si Simola in the part of the Mexican "Tony." The "Tony" who had plenty of time to strum on his guitar, and sing melancholy verses to his lady-love, but who, when the time came, could also deal out death to the man who had hurt his "Lena."

Hank Foster took the part of the Colonel of the regiment, who doubted his young and pretty wife, Estrella. Dorothy Wootton, as Mrs. Canby drew much applause in her characterization of an irritable old lady.

The two characters of Lena and her father, Sergeant Keller, were played by Janet West and Nelson English respectively, and furnished many heart throbs and bits of comedy.

Among the others who supported the leads were: Ray Dunn as Sam Wong, a Cook; Naomi Wilson as Miss MacCollough, a school teacher; Bark Laughlin, a surgeon; Don Davis as Lieutenant Hallock; Barney Garrett as Major Cochran; and Elmer Pendell as Lieutenant Young. Claire Holdridge took the part of an orderly, and Ed Haney, Paul Sayre, Earl Dickensheet and Howard Winnard were soldiers.

The student body committee in charge of the play was John Houston, chairman; Robert Earl and Marian Taylor. Properties were taken care of by Cecil Adams and Ted Baker, who deserve considerable credit for their faithful work. Arvo Simola directed the advertising.

MANY HEAR RECITAL

John Stark Evans Pleases In Second of Lenten Series.

The second of the series of Lenten organ recitals by John Stark Evans was given at the Methodist church on Sunday to a large and appreciative audience. That the people of Eugene appreciate the opportunity to hear such excellent music as these recitals offer is evidenced by the increasing numbers of those who attend.

Opening with the old favorite "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" the program was excellent throughout. The descriptive "Springtime Sketch" was followed by the beautiful "Meditation" from the Suite in B Minor.

The crowning number of the organ program was the Suite "To My Country." Each of the four movements served to reveal Mr. Evans' ability as an artist and his appreciation of the power of his instrument.

George Hopkins' rendition of "Come, Ye Blessed" by Scott was a fitting conclusion for the excellent program. This is a beautiful number and the singer showed his complete understanding of its possibilities.

Professor McAlister and Miss Copenhaver in Mathematical Society.

Professor E. H. McAlister of the department of mechanics and astronomy and Miss M. Lucile Copenhaver of the department of mathematics have been honored by election to the American Mathematical Society according to word received on the campus from the headquarters of the society in New York.
