THE NEW OFFICERS.

The election is over. Let's forget it, the worries and struggles which accompanied the campaign, and get behind those who were elected. The successful candidates are those who will lead Oregon next year, in spite of anything that may be said or thought now. It is our duty to support the successful candidates next year, inasmuch as support of them in the only way to a successful year.

Next year will be a crucial year, since the adoption of the new constitution means additional work for all the new officers. The new president, vice-president and secretary will find their duties more exacting than at any previous time, and support of them by a united student body is essential.

The elected members of the executive council will fill a new position, created by the new constitution. They will have no preceding office-holders to guide them in their new work, and they are likely at the start to make mistakes. Students should not fail to recognize this and to make allowances at the start.

The new editor of the Emerald has a hard year ahead. This year the Emerald has made its way as a daily for the first time, laboring under difficulties which may multiply next year. Co-operation between all officers elected is another essential factor in making the coming year successful.

The big thing now is to forget the campaign, and all the politics which went with it. The thing to remember is that the candidates who were elected, were given their positions in most cases by a majority vote, and with a majority of the students behind him, the new officer cannot make his way successfully next year unless he feels that the majority will be augmented by the rest of the student body.

When the new officers take over their new duties next month, it is up to all of us to give them all the opportunity in the world to make good.

W. S. C. goes home happy, with two victories pocketed. The games with O. A. C. are still before us, meaning that we've got to beat the Corvallis tossers or die in the attempt.

Will the congregation join in heaving a sigh of relief? The election is over.

MARKHAM RETURNS AND GIVES VERSES

Famous Poet Gives Definition Then Interpretation.

In his interpretation of his own poetry Edwin Markham last night fulfilled to the utmost his definition of true poetical verse. "Poetry," said Mr. Markham, "touches everything with the ideal, and makes of it a divine reality."

Edwin Markham, now white-haired, yet still possessing all his youth in his rendition of his verse, spoke with an earnestness and appeal that was greatly appreciated by a very enthusiastic audience at the Y. M. C. A. hut.

Beginning his program with his famous "Child of My Heart," Mr. Markham delivered a series of poems, among which "The Witness of the Dust," "A Creed," "Poet Lore," "A Prayer," and "Your Tears" received especial approval.

Making use of his ability as a trained speaker, Mr. Markham would occasionally stop in his readings to explain some phase of the great field of verse. "True poetry reveals to us the unlooked-for beauty in the world about us. Around every factor in life is a halo of wonder, and it is this wonder that a poet must beautify and give to the world. Poetry is greater than the art of colors—it is greater than music, because it combines them all."

Throughout his lecture, the speaker made excellent use of many little humorous incidents, and experiences. In his quaint way he explained his long absence from Oregon with the statement, "I wished to be at the top and crest of my power before I returned to my beloved Oregon."

In conclusion, Mr. Markham read a few of his famous quatrains, and then, at the request of the audience, he read his "The Lincoln," and with a few remarks, his world famous "The Man With a Hoe."

After the lecture, Mr. Markham, at a reception in the Woman's building, discussed his works, and the works of others, with an ability and understanding that showed that he fully merits all the praise that has been given him.

NEW BUILDING PRAISED

Miss May Walsh Visits Campus, Says Athletic Apparatus Good.

Miss May Walsh, field agent for women's sporting goods for the A. G. Spalding company, was a campus visitor yesterday. She was quite impressed with the new Woman's building, especially with the corrective and remedial apparatus. She also complimented Oregon upon her provision for health work and physical education for women, as compared with that provided for men.

"There is absolutely nothing like it on this coast for women," she said, speaking of the building as a whole, "and very few in the United States that approach it—and I have seen a great many."

DRAMATIC SOCIETY TO GIVE OPEN-AIR PLAY

Mask and Dagger at O. A. C. Will Work With Engineering Department For Lighting Effect.

(By Pacific Intercollegiate News Service)
Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis.
May 12.—Elaborate electric lighting effects will feature the open-air production of the Mask and Dagger dramatic society on the lower campus Saturday, May 21. The lighting is under the direction of "Ken" Hall, of Portland, an electrical engineering student. Bleachers, with a seating capacity of 2500, will be put up around the natural theater, and will be enclosed by a canvas wall. Quincy Corrie, manager, has started work on the stage plans.

The cast has been working hard for several weeks on the play, "Midsummer Nights Dream." Aside from the regular coaching of Miss Norma Olson, instructor in expression and dramatic interpretation, C. B. Mitchell, professor of public speaking, is devoting considerable time to the direction of the play. Professor Mitchell has traveled with stock companies and appeared in Shakespearean plays several seasons before large eastern audiences. His wide experience is considered an asset in staging the play.

TRE NU GIVES DINNER

Sun Parlor of Woman's Building Used; To Elect Officers Tuesday.

Tre Nu met in the sun parlor of the Woman's building Wednesday evening for an informal dinner. They used the new wicker tables and enjoyed the new meeting place very much according to those present. Mrs. A. R. Sweetser, honorary member of the society, and Dean Fox were guests.

The girls will have their election of officers next Tuesday evening between 7 and 8 in Professor Gilbert's room in the library. The officers now are: Jennie Maguire, president; Florence Fursset, treasurer, and Myrtle Anderson, secretary.
