THE NEW GRADUATE MANAGER.

A new graduate manager will probably guide the destinies of Oregon. He may have new policies, new ideas, and new methods of conducting the office. But out of a list of several candidates George Hug was selected as the man most fitted to fill the office made vacant by the resignation of Marion McClain a short time ago. The fact that last night's session lasted four hours is indicative of the desire of the councils to secure the best man obtainable and to fully discuss the qualifications of each candidate.

The new graduate manager will be heartily welcomed by all Oregon students, as a man to keep Oregon in the high place which previous holders of that office have placed her. That he will make good goes without saying. He has made good at everything he has undertaken.

The recent action of the formation of the "Big Three," the stir following that action and the resultant unpleasant scheduling of next year's football games, the recent straining of relations with the southern members of the coast conference, and problems related to these will all confront the new graduate manager when he takes office, unless they are settled before that time, which seems unlikely. He has a gigantic task before him. We all realize that.

Since George Hug has been elected to the position of graduate manager, there is but one thing for students to do. We must support him and his policies, ideas and methods as long as we are certain that they go towards the making of a Greater Oregon. And the record of the man proves not only that he will work towards that end, but that his work towards that end will be successful.

Congratulations, Mr. Hug!

It is only just that the retiring graduate manager be given his share of credit for placing Oregon in the position where it now stands. Financially, Oregon is better off than it has been for some time. While acting as graduate manager, Marion McClain succeeded in building Hayward field, when the finances of the associated students warranted no such feat, and he has almost succeeded in eliminating the debt incurred by its erection. Other duties caused his resignation, or the position would probably not have been filled by another man. Jack Benefiel, in the short time that he has served as acting graduate manager, has also succeeded in handling the position efficiently, and will continue to do so until relieved.

GOVERNMENT TEACHING POSITIONS ARE OPEN

Salaries of From $1400 to $2260 Are Offered Specialists in Certain Lines of Educational Work.

Dean H. D. Sheldon, of the school of education, has just received a circular letter from the United States Bureau of Education at Washington, D. C., describing the qualifications and the basis for appointments to various educational positions.

The government is looking for a specialist in foreign school systems, at a salary of $1800 a year, according to this letter; a specialist in rural schools at $2260 a year; high school teachers for positions in the Philippine Islands, at salaries varying from $1500 to $2000 a year, and primary teachers at from $1400 to $1600 a year. These positions, Dean Sheldon says, are open to persons who have made a specialty of their different branches of teaching, and are qualified to be supervisors, or do other work of that sort.

There is a demand for educational directors and teachers for the Federal Board of Vocational Education, according to the letter received by Dean Sheldon, at salaries ranging from $1600 to $2000 a year.

In most cases the applicants must pass examinations in Seattle or San Francisco, and the positions, Dean Sheldon says are likely to be given to persons who have had some experience in their work. Dean Sheldon will give further information in the matter to anyone that applies to him.

SURVEY BEING MADE BY OREGON PROFESSOR

Errors Made By Proofreaders Subject of Investigation Article Printed in Magazine.

The investigation of proofreaders' illusions which is being conducted by Dr. H. R. Crosland, of the University department of psychology, is the subject of an article appearing in the Typographical Journal, the official paper of the International Union of North America.

In the May issue, Dr. Crosland gives a resume of the experiments conducted so far. The purpose of the study, he says, is to determine the causes for errors made by proofreaders, errors that seem strangely habitual, or due to either ignorance or carelessness.

These errors, says Dr. Crosland, usually fall into two general classes, defined as illusions, and negative hallucination. In the first, the proofreader out-and-out omits words, punctuation marks, and spaces, and in the second classification, the reader wrongly sees the words or letters on the printed sheet.

Dr. Crosland is at present conducting a test in accuracy along these lines that is requiring about 30 subjects. These people are chosen from four groups, journalism, practical printers, beginning students of journalism, and students of psychology. Several tests are to be arranged.

"The undertaking," says Dr. Crosland in his article, "will be necessarily slow and will require the utmost patience."

GIRL PADDLERS TRY FOR PLACES IN MEET

Each Team to Enter Teams in Tryouts to Determine Entries in Canoe Races.

Preliminary canoe races will be held next week to decide which teams shall compete for the W. A. A. trophy on Field Day, May 28. The junior and senior and the sophomore and freshmen will race, and the winners will enter the final competition.

The freshmen and sophomore teams have already been chosen. Muriel Meyers and Lillian Flint won the fresh preliminaries last week and will represent their class. Natrude Larson and Gladys Johnson will paddle for the sophomores. Two teams each have signed for the upper classes, one of which will be eliminated before the class races. Oletta Pederson and Betty London, and Vivian Chandler and Nancy Fields are to try out for the senior team. Prospective junior paddlers are Emma Jane Garbade and Carolyn Cannon, and Alice Evans and Lois

Barnett. Miss Emma Waterman, instructor in canoeing, will have charge of the preliminary races.
