NEW SPECIES DESCRIBED

Condon Museum Specimens Basis Of Pamphlet

All the available information concerning a group of fossil mollusks found on the Pacific coast belonging to the genus Trigonia has been gathered together by Dr. E. L. Packard and published under the name of "The Trigoniae from the Pacific Coast of North America," as a University publication. Eleven new species and varieties are described and figured besides detailed descriptions and many illustrations of all previously described species from the coast. This work is one of the first to be aided by the research committee of the University. The research was started early in 1920 and its completion was made possible by a grant from the committee.

Condon Specimens Studied.

The article is based on the study of a large number of specimens belonging to the Condon museum, some of which were early collected by Dr. Thomas Condon. Other specimens belonged to the Canadian and the United States geological surveys and to various Pacific coast institutions.

The genus Trigonia is so named because of its typical trigonal shape. It is characteristic of the Jurassic and Cretaceous, the latter periods of the Age of Reptiles. This genus became extinct everywhere except in the isolated continent of Australia, at the close of the Cretaceous during the time when the great earth movements culminated in the uplift of the Rocky mountains. This restricted range in geologic time and the highly ornamented character of these shells makes them of great importance as indicators of geologic horizons.

Asiatic Forms Resembled.

The oldest known West Coast Trigonia fauna occurs in the lower Jurassic rocks of Taylorsville, California. These species were cosmopolitan types being closely related to forms then living in India and Western Europe. Later, in the Jurassic, the species still show close affinities with Asiatic forms, indicating that free migration was possible along the shores of the shallow waters bordering the Pacific and through a great Mediterranean sea stretching across southern Asia into southwestern Europe. The Upper Cretaceous time marks the epoch of maximum development of this group on this coast when 17 species and varieties were living in waters then covering parts of California, a large portion of Oregon, and lesser areas to the northward. These species unlike the Jurassic ones are not related to the Indian and European special, indicating that earth movements had closed the earlier migration routes and had opened others. These Chico West Coast forms have, however, close affinities with the species from the Japanese Cretaceous.

ROWBOATS ALLOWED AS ENTRIES IN FETE

Scarcity Of Canoes Brings Committee Action

All plans are completed for the canoe fete, which will start promptly at 8:30 this evening. All entries are urged to be there on time as the fete will begin on time and each float must be ready when its turn comes to go down the race.

Owing to the shortage in the supply of canoes on the campus, organizations which are unable to secure them for their floats in the canoe fete tonight will be allowed to use rowboats, according to Wayne Akers, chairman of the general committee in charge of the fete. Many have found it impossible to procure canoes, and the committee makes this special dispensation to provide for the difficulty, and enable all to enter in the event.

Plans for the fete include a reserved section for the faculty, as the crowds will more than fill at the seating room. The committee also plans to have some students designated as life guards, in order to provide against any calamity resulting from a canoe capsizing, or spectators falling into the race.

The various committees for the event have been busy, especially during the past few days, and plans are now practically completed. Several novelties are promised, and the lighting scheme which has been worked out will be unusual. All campus organizations have their floats practically completed. The canoes will enter the fete in five groups, and will take their places in the parade in alphabetical order.

Special sections will be reserved for the two glee clubs, who will sing as a special feature of the fete. The University band will also contribute some music to the evening's entertainment.

An effort will be made to provide the guests with the best seating available. Bill Collins, who is in charge of the seating, urges all to come early, especially those with guests, as no reservations will be made. The Y. M. C. A. has cooperated with the canoe fete committee in furnishing all the chairs from the "Y" hut. As a much larger crowd than seats are provided for is expected, only those who come early will be able to view the fete comfortably.

The Anchorage is making special arrangements for the fete, and announce that special arrangements may be made for tables.

STAGE FOR JUNIOR WEEK-END ALL SET

400 Preppers Are Expected As Campus Visitors

Get ready! Get set! has been sounded for Junior Week-end. The millrace is all dolled up in her festive glad rags, the Junior Prom is all here except the dancers. Hayward field is in good condition for the big meet, every man on the campus has received an invitation "A la Emerald" to spend Friday morning on the campus, and in fact, everyone is rarin' to go.

There will be among us, according to Oden Johnson, general chairman, about 400 preppers and many other guests. Even old Jupe Pluvius has been hangin' around trying to horn in; but the Missouri jackrabbit's hind foot that Oden Johnson is totin' around in his hip pocket seems to make him keep his distance.

The patrons and patronesses for the Junior Prom will be: Governor and Mrs. Oleott, President and Mrs. Campbell, Dean and Mrs. John Straub, Dean Fox, Dr. R. B. Dillehunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Harris, Mrs. G. T. Gerlinger, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lomax, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Grant, Mr. E. B. Piper, Dean and Mrs. C. V. Dymont and Miss M. Perkins. Look these names over and learn how to pronounce them correctly, for the Junior Prom committee says that they are the first people you are going to meet on that evening.

KAPPA HITTERS RIVAL BABE RUTH'S HOMERS

Three Runs In The Last Inning Score Victory

Babe Ruth's rivals in Kappa Kappa Gamma knocked three home runs in the last inning of her game with Susan Campbell hall Tuesday afternoon and won the game by one point, the score being 23 to 22. At the end of the sixth inning the teams were tied. In the seventh the Susan Campbell girls made two tallies, but the three homers knocked by the Kappa batters won for her the hardest game she has played yet this season. Susan Campbell hall had previously been defeated but once, by Hendricks hall, the leading team of League II.

The Kappas have not yet seen defeat and their game with Hendricks next Monday will decide which team will play for League II in deciding the doughnut series. Oregon club will probably be the League I champion. She has met and defeated the other leading team of that league, the Tri Dells, and has lost no games.
