The Big Pep Fest

RALLIES will go on forever. As a molder of Oregon Fight and a symbol of Oregon Spirit they will exist on the campus as long as Oregon exists. Today has been set as the start off, and from today's showing of pep and enthusiasm the new Oregon student body will be judged.

The biggest event of the year is the first rally. Everything gets its impetus from it, pep runs rampant and the real display of Oregon Spirit is allowed to rule supreme. Elaborate preparations have been made for taking care of the "thundering thousand" this afternoon and when yell leader Oberteuffer begins his unwinding process it will be the signal for the entire student body to raise in a mighty "Oskey."

Last Thursday saw the first assembly get off to a flying start. The assembly hall was crowded, the students overflowed into the hallways and nearly two thousand passed through the portals of old Villard Hall. Today the grand stand on Hayward Field should be crowded, the students should overflow into the aisles, and the two thousand should again be on hand.

Oregon's football team has been fighting day in and day out since September 15, and their efforts have not been in vain. That smashing team full of fight and with the Oregon student body behind it faces a hard schedule this year, the second game of which will be played on Hayward Field Saturday.

Every man on that team has heard the students say, "We are with you." But every man on that team has not yet seen that involuntary outburst from the student body which proves that Oregon Spirit is backing up that Oregon Fight. That team is now looking to the student body and framing the query as to where that student body stands.

Women and men alike typify the Oregon Spirit. It has long been a record of which Oregon has been proud that the coeds appreciate the efforts of the football team and prove their loyalty by attending the rallies.

Will there be any slackers tomorrow afternoon when the pandemonium of the first pep fest breaks loose on Hayward Field?

KEITH KIGGINS WORKS IN AID OF VETERANS

Former Student Represents Red Cross "Clean-up Squad" in Oregon and Washington

Keith Kiggins, ex-'18, is working as the Red Cross representative on the Oregon and Washington "Clean-up squad" of the newly formed Veterans' Bureau which is endeavoring to clear up all claims of ex-service men. The squad is covering most of the territory of the two states. Kiggins was in school last year.

The Veterans' Bureau has been formed by the combination of the old Bureaus of Public Health Service, War Risk Insurance, and Vocational Training. The Red Cross is represented in the work of the Bureau. The claims settled vary from physical disability to unpaid railway fare. The headquarters of the squad is in Seattle.

Kiggins graduated from the University ordinance school in 1917, and during the war was the moving force in the largest ordinance depot in France, according to statements made by his commanding officer at the time that he petitioned for University credit for war work. He held the rank of first lieutenant at the time of his discharge.

The manager is to be appointed under the new student body constitution, which will probably be done in the next few days. Rex Underwood, the director of the orchestra last year will again be the instructor.

According to the new president plans are being made for even more extensive trips than were made last year and will be announced in a short time.

The military work at the University is rapidly being organized, according to Major Baird. The Cadet officers who have been appointed and assigned to the various companies are as follows: Captain Mark Latham, Company "A"; Captain James Meek, Company "B"; Captain Roscoe Roberts, Company "C"; Captain Don Zimmerman, Company "D."

CAMPUS POSTMASTER AT OREGON 13 YEARS

Former Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds Hopes Growth Won't Check Friendly Spirit

If in asking at the University post-office for that letter from home, you encounter a welcoming smile from the friendly, middle-aged man at the stamp window, know then that you are talking to H. M. Fisher, head of the University mailing department. He is one of Oregon's oldest and best friends.

Mr. Fisher, up until this year superintendent of buildings and grounds, has been on the campus since the spring of 1908 and states that after long experience he doubts if any other university can be compared with Oregon for spirit.

"I haven't liked to see the University getting larger every year for fear that some of that campus friendliness would go," said Mr. Fisher. "New students can't be blamed for wanting to come here though," he continued with a twinkling in the kindly blue eyes behind gold-rimmed spectacles. "Their attitude is like the story of the man who stood so long looking in the store window. He attracted most of the people on the street, who thought that there must be something worthwhile inside or he wouldn't be standing there." Mr Fisher is sure that the new students who have been attracted to Oregon by the ever-increasing enrollment, are going to find something worth while. Among the new students is his son, who is a member of the class of '25.
