A Progressive Step

As a result of a thorough investigation and comparison with the methods now in use in other schools on the coast and of the situation as it now exists at Oregon, a committee appointed last week by Lyle Bartholomew, president of the A. S. U. O., has recommended what may seem to many, a radical change in the governing of the first year class. This plan of organization was not worked out on the spur of the moment but has been considered for the past year and is the culmination of a series of events making some sort of immediate action necessary.

There is one opposition which the new plan is bound to face, and that is the matter of changing traditions. Traditions on the campus are held sacred by the members of the student body. Yet, the point to be strongly considered in this matter is as to just the exact status of this tradition? Can this be classed along with our other traditions?

Elective positions as executives in various class and student activities at Oregon should no longer be considered lightly. With the increased attendance yearly at Oregon, the executive position of the freshmen class, especially, is a position which requires a man of character and ability. Among the tasks which he must direct is that of building the huge rally bonfire which always takes place before the Homecoming game. This is a tradition which should always be observed carefully, and every effort expended in making the rally a big success. Another duty is the guarding of the "O" on Skinner's Butte, and there are many others of almost equal importance.

There will no doubt be some of the details of the new plan of organization which will not prove satisfactory to the entire student body. The Emerald firmly believes, however, that the plan as outlined is a good one and that every effort should be made to perfect an organization of merit. Whether Fro-tra-co is to be the proper organization for carrying out the responsibility attached to this new undertaking remains to be seen. The idea must be instilled in all to make the plan a success, the organization to take charge of its development will depend upon the merits of such an organization.
