Sentiment for Thanksgiving

A prominent member of the faculty stated yesterday that a strong student sentiment against the action of the faculty in abolishing the Friday following Thanksgiving Day as a holiday would be given every consideration by the faculty. The Emerald contends that there is such a sentiment—convincing; strong enough to carry the point with the faculty.

Sentiment is a peculiar word. Webster defines it as being "A decision of mind formed by deliberation or reasoning, thought, opinion, judgment." Evidently that is the point at which the students have already arrived in this matter.

The students have reached a decision after deliberation and reasoning. The Emerald believes that every student on the campus within the past week has reasoned the matter out. Then as a united student body we can express ourselves on the basis of this strong student sentiment.

We must prove to the faculty that we have reasoned this thing out. That this is no impetuous outbreak, but a quiet sentiment. The Emerald firmly believes that the majority of students on this campus are not thinking merely of the fact that this Friday holiday will mean another day of escape from routine.

In fact, we contend the opposite. If the faculty judges this to be the case, they have misinterpreted our presence as students of the University. Is there a student who can say that he wishes to escape class duties and add another holiday? We are not here for that purpose.

Thanksgiving holiday is a matter of sentiment, and we have not lost sight of the significance of Thanksgiving Day. There is in the heart of every student a feeling of home ties, of a chance to visit with mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers. Some, it is true cannot go home on account of the distance, but classmates have invited most of these to be their guests over Thanksgiving.

The faculty should consider the sentiment of the student who desires to go home for Thanksgiving.

"OLD OREGON" WILL BE READY IN TEN DAYS

Magazine Will Include Articles by Dean Allen, Dean Dymont, and Melvin Solve

Mary Lou Burton, the editor of next month's "Old Oregon," says that the copy is practically all in and that the magazine will be ready for distribution about the 29th of this month.

"One of the principal features," she says, "is a Homecoming letter by Dean Eric Allen, which will make the 'old grads' simply grab their hats and bags and take the first train to Eugene."

Carlton E. Spencer, registrar, is writing a story for this number about the stupendous growth in the enrollment of the University, while Dean Dymont will discuss in his article the advance in scholarship.

An article by Melvin Solve, instructor in the rhetoric department, on his impressions of student life at the University of Christiania, will be of special interest. Mr. Solve, who received a fellowship in that institution, was a student there last year.

"There will be a number of personal items about old graduates and former students, with emphasis upon the unusual ways in which so many have made good," Miss Burton says.

The publication will be used extensively as an advertisement for the University of Oregon, in showing the capability of its graduates. It will be placed in all of the fraternities, clubs and halls, while extra copies for mailing will be on sale at the Co-op.

STADIUM COST $20,000,000

Ohio State stadium accommodates 62,845 persons; the new one at Stanford will take care of 70,000; Michigan can take care of 77,000, and the one planned by the University of California will accommodate even more. It is estimated that $20,000,000 was spent this summer on stadiums in various colleges in this country.

Announcements

Rhodes Aspirants—University men who are planning on becoming candidates for the Rhodes Scholarship at any future time should send their names, addresses and phone numbers to Dean Dymont, Chairman of the Scholarship committee, so that a meeting can be held sometime this term to discuss university work and outside reading with reference to the Scholarship.

Freshmen—Freshmen in school of business administration required to attend lecture in Professor Howe's room in Villard Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Dean Robbins will talk on the Freshman's responsibility to the School, and to the University.

Household Arts Club—Meeting on Friday afternoon at four o'clock in the Household Arts building (old music building) for all those interested in household arts. Old members must be present, and new students in the department are cordially invited.

Ex-Service Men—Join the American Legion. Membership cards can be obtained from Miss Grace Robertson, University health service, or Miss Elma Ordahl, Y. W. bungalow.

Tre Nu—There will be a meeting of Tre Nu today at five o'clock in the classroom in the journalism shack.

CHANGES MADE IN STAFF

Emerald Adds Three to News Force; Reporter Made Night Editor

Emerald staff appointments which were made public last night announced that three new members had been added to the news staff and that several promotions had been made.

Dan Lyons was promoted from a reporter to a night editor and Harold Shirley and Edwin Fraser were appointed sports writers. Eunice Zimmerman is to handle the exchanges, and Dorris Sikes will be the statistician for the Emerald. The three new members of the news staff are Genevieve Jewell, Rosalia Keber, and Freda Goodrich. There are a number who are still trying out for the staff, and more appointments will be made.
