Extension Division Has 850 Students This Year

In accordance with the policy of the University extension division, faculty members representing the principal courses and several of the minor ones offered by the University curriculum are making weekly trips to Portland to conduct classes in their respective departments.

Courses are offered by E. C. Robbins, dean of the school of business administration—employment management; Celia V. Hager, instructor in psychology—classes in psychology; Ernest S. Bates, head of the department of rhetoric—drama; Avarad Fairbanks, assistant instructor in architecture—Adams, professor of graphics—graphic statics and elements of structural design; Franklin F. Folts, instructor in business finance—money and banking; Alfred L. Lomax, professor of foreign trade and geographical lectures; Mary H. Perkins of the department of rhetoric—English composition and theme writing; H. D. Sheldon, dean of the school of education—classes in education; John R. Whitaker, professor of marketing and selling—salesmanship and marketing methods.

C. A. Gregory and F. L. Stetson of the school of education are conducting a combined class in present-day problems of education and public school system. Ruth Montgomery of the education department is holding a weekly clinic in mental tests and measurements. Kimball Young, instructor in psychology, is teaching two classes in psychology, while T. J. Bolitho, professor of accounting, reports a large increase in all his classes.

Dr. John J. Landsbury, dean of music, is scheduled to deliver lectures on the symphonies to be performed by the Portland Symphony orchestra on October 29, December 9, January 20, February 3, March 3, and April 14. Rex Underwood, of the school of music is conducting a class in orchestra work weekly.

According to Dr. George Rebec, head of the extension division who is on the campus this week, the number of students enrolled in the extension classes now totals 850 or 100 in excess of last year's figure. There are 115 in the class in English composition, while 25 of the students registered in the classes of social service are intending to become professionals in this field. The large membership in the public speaking department has warranted the organization of a club composed only of members of these classes, which is engaging in a number of activities of interest to the students.

The public library, Lincoln high school, the architectural club, Sherman Clay music hall and the Presbyterian church house at Portland are now used by the extension division to accommodate the increased student body.

SIGMA CHI AND FRIENDLY PLAY U. H. S. FIVE

University Men Have Lively Games With High School, Practicing For Doughnut Basketball

The Sigma Chi and Friendly hall basketball teams are practicing against the University high school team by way of preparation for the doughnut series. Although the high school boys are small they have had practice and the four games played have been warmly contested, according to Professor H. R. Douglass educational director. Because there are a large number of mature students, 50 per cent of the juniors and seniors being boys, the high school expects to do more work in basketball and baseball than it has done hitherto. George I. McIntyre, formerly head of the Baker high school, is physical director. Records of the physical measurements of each student are being made under the supervision of the University health department.

Gymnasium classes for the high school girls will be organized later. Six or eight physical education majors of the University will be in charge.

HOUSE ONE YEAR MOVING

Robert W. Prescott Owner of Property Occupied by University Professors

It took just one year to move a house from the hill on Fairmount boulevard to its present mooring on University avenue directly across from Hendricks hall. The rainy season prevented rapid progress. Sometimes it took a month to move the house the distance of one block, and at times all work ceased, but finally the building has reached its destination. It has been remodeled and is complete with the exception of a coat of paint.

Robert W. Prescott formerly professor in the department of public speaking in the University is the owner of the property and has made it into a quartet of apartments. The house is occupied by Dr. E. S. Bates, head of the rhetoric department; Prof. James Miller of the school of law; and Lieutenant Knowles of the military department.

DEBATE LEAGUE REVIVED

TWO DIVISIONS WILL PROMOTE INTEREST OF STUDENTS

Men's and Women's Organizations Will Meet in Final Round for Campus Championship and Cup

The Doughnut Debate League is to be revived this fall after a year's idleness, in an attempt to interest more of the students on the campus along this line, and to give more of the students a chance to debate.

There are two divisions in the league, the men's and women's organizations, each being in a separate group, and after the winner is picked from each group, they hold a final debate, for the championship and the debate cup, which is at present held by Hendricks hall, whose team won it in 1919 when the last Doughnut debates were held.

The question which the Forensic council has selected for debate, and which the men have approved is, "Resolved that the United States should adopt a national system of direct primaries for selection of candidates for President. The women's organizations have not approved of this question, and are to hold a meeting soon to decide whether they will adopt a new question or not.

According to Paul Patterson, debate manager, there will be approximately 15 teams in the league, and each of these organizations will have two teams, an affirmative, and a negative.

The first debates will be held on November 15, and the schedule will be made out on November 14, when representatives from the different organizations will meet and draw for their places on the schedule.

Women's debate will not start till a week or ten days later, so as to give the men's schedule plenty of time to get under way.

Each affirmative or negative team will participate in two debates, and from all the debaters three winners will be picked who will be in the finals for the championship of the League. The winner of this final series will then meet the champion of the women's organizations for the championship of the school, and possession of the cup.

KANSAS AGGIES ADOPT COLOR

Until commencement time last year, the Kansas State Agricultural college had no official color, although "Purple and White" had been used in all decorations. The faculty decided that white had no particular significance and that "Royal Purple" should be the color to represent K. S. A. C.
