

COLLEGE GIRLS DECLARED BEST OF SOCIAL WORKERS

More Original, Better Group Leaders, Says Visitor

MISS MARY CLARK HERE

Home Mission Representative Praises Adaptability

One college-trained young woman engaged in social service work is as valuable to the service as three or four who have not had the training that college can give, according to Miss Mary E. Clark, who visited the Oregon campus Thursday and Friday in the interest of the Presbyterian boards of home and foreign missions, of which she is representative.

"The reason for this," Miss Clark explained, "is that college girls are more original and have more group leadership than girls who have never gone to college. Their work in various organizations and activities has given them self-confidence and ingenuity and has made them splendid organizers, able to plan out new work and to see it through. They have wonderful adaptability."

College Activities Praised
"After all," said Miss Clark, in a tone of conviction, "I believe college life contributes fully as much as a college education. Someone has said," she remarked gaily, "that the greatest thing college gives one is the nerve to try anything, whether he knows how to do it or not. And," she added, smiling, "I rather believe that's true."

When asked about the work that these college girls are doing, Miss Clark cited numerous instances of their going out among foreigners living in congested quarters and caring for the children while the parents worked in factories and canneries, meanwhile teaching them habits of cleanliness, wholesome recreation, American ideals, and even giving them school instruction.

Children Get Little School

"The children of these cannery people cannot attend school regularly," Miss Clark said, "because of the temporary and transient character of their parents' work. During the canning season, the workers move from place to place as needed, seldom staying in any one place longer than a few weeks. The children's school work is interrupted so often that they have little chance to learn. Sometimes they cannot attend school at all, as in the case of two 12-year-old boys, who were thrilled beyond measure at being taught by the girls to write their own names."

High Service Performed

By teaching these children higher standards of living, as well as giving their foreign-born parents an insight into American ideals, these college girls are performing an invaluable service to their country, Miss Clark believes. "Conditions among these congested groups of very new immigrants are ideal for the spreading of bolshevism," she continued, "and the girls are trying to help them before they become embittered. Often they can work reform through the employers themselves. It has sometimes happened that the employer had simply failed to realize that the children ought to be looked out for while their parents work. In that case, he is glad to cooperate with the girls. At other times, the girls simply go into these communities 'on their own' and establish their camps with a trained nurse in attendance, and prepare for their social service work. The Presbyterian board pays for the maintenance of such camps."

BATTLE FOR BETTER ENGLISH IS HEADED BY FACULTY WOMAN

its work in the grade schools, carrying it directly through the high school to the colleges. The slogan of the council is "Every teacher an English teacher." A membership drive is now in progress, and every day more and more Oregon teachers are enlisting for the cause of better English. With this excellent cooperation, Miss Turney believes, Oregon bids fair to become foremost in this nationwide movement. In order most effectively to reach the desired end the program is thus divided: a program of research into the desired results of English teaching to be carried on by educational leaders of Oregon; a program for the betterment of the teaching of English to be carried on by patrons and teachers; a program of improvement in speech and writing to be carried on by pupils of Oregon schools under the direction of the teachers.

To Correlate Teaching
The specific purpose of the campaign in Oregon are to correlate the teaching of English with other subjects; to establish a definite requirement for English instructors in this state; and to coordinate the English work in the grades, high school, and college. English clubs are being organized all over Oregon at the present time, and these organizations include teachers of all subjects, in an effort to improve English wherever it is used. A special committee of five school administrators, headed by Dr. H. D. Sheldon, dean of the university school of education, is working out a set of requirements for English teachers, which will be presented to the council for approval. Questionnaires have been sent to all the English instructors in Oregon to determine their qualifications.

Three Oregon Members
There are also 20 administrators in this state who are heads of separate research committees, the chairman having selected their own members and their own subjects, which, however, were suggested by the council. These committees will work on some specific phase of the comprehensive program, such as, oral English, or applied grammar. Reports from these committees will be heard, and action taken upon the results of their research.

Three members of the University faculty are vitally connected with this work, namely, Miss Turney, Miss Julia Burgess, professor of rhetoric, who is an Oregon representative on the national council, and Dr. H. D. Sheldon. Mrs. Margaret Goodall, head of the English department of the University high school, is secretary-treasurer of the Oregon Council of English.

JUNIORS WIN CONTEST FROM BATTLING SOPHS

Wearers of Cords Annex 35 Counters to 19 of Rivals

The sophomores were unable to withstand the fast passing and accurate shooting of the juniors last night, and suffered a 35 to 19 defeat in the final and championship game of the interclass series, which was played in the men's gym at 4 o'clock. The juniors won the interclass series last year also, with practically the same team that carried off the championship this season.

The juniors started the game with a burst of scoring, and for a time the game looked like an easy victory, but the sophomores came back during the last part of the half, and it ended with the juniors only three baskets in the lead. With the beginning of the second half the sophomores seemed to lose confidence, for their passing and team work were only half-hearted, and the men vied with one another in taking long shots.

The winners played a strong defensive game that the sophomores seemed unable to solve, for the ball was in the possession of the wearers of cords during the larger share of the game.

The sophomores showed an occasional flash, but their work as a team was ragged, and their defense poor.

The entire junior team played a good brand of ball and no men stood out in particular. Rockey was high point man with 13, while Zimmerman was only one point behind. The men who showed up best for the sophomores were Moores at guard, and Wilsey at forward.

The lineup was:
Juniors (35) Sophomores (19)
Rockey F 13 Alstock F 7
Beaver F 10 Wilsey F 4
Zimmerman C 12 McMillan C
Couch G Goar G
Burnett G Black G 4
Substitutions—Sophomores: Edlund for Wilsey, Black for McMillan, Moores 2 for Black, Shaffer 2 for Edlund. Juniors: None. Referee: Durno. Timer: Bohler. Scorer: Fraser.

TRAVELLER FROM COAST TO COAST VISITS CAMPUS

James Alby Hill, 67, on Walking Tour, Stops to Make Call Upon President Campbell

Supported by a crutch, the bent yet sturdy figure of an old man, crowned by a mass of thick, white hair, which curled around his shoulders, limped into President Campbell's office yesterday afternoon. He was James Alby Hill, 67, of Berkeley, California, and he is on a coast to coast walking tour, in search of health.

Mr. Hill is the bearer of two interesting books. One is a register which contains the signatures of prominent known Californians to Eastern state officials, and letters from well-known officials. In this book is the signature of Governor Stephens of California, and the signatures of state officials. Mr. Hill, who was seeking the signature of President Campbell, presented him with a framed picture of himself taken in Golden Gate park, San Francisco. The other book, which Mr. Hill refers to as his "art-souvenirs," contains pictures taken on his trip, and messages from prominent men in California to Eastern officials. Mr. Hill is the bearer of a message from President Barrows, of the University of California, to President Bogen of Colgate university, New York. Governor Boyle of Nevada is sending greetings by Mr. Hill to Governor Brown of New Hampshire.

Eastpoint, Maine, is the destination of this 67-year-old hiker, who started from Berkeley last February on the 189th anniversary of George Washington's birth. "It is determination that counts," declared the traveller, "and that's what is carrying me along."

Both are exceedingly practical courses. The banking course, which will give six term hours' credit, is intended to be of use to the young man just starting out in the banking business, and also to the business man who needs to know something of banking methods. ### GIRLS' HOCKEY TO BEGIN; CLASS SERIES PLANNED

Special Practice Announced; Women Urged to Turn Out; Contest Dates To Be Announced

Special practice for the girls' class hockey teams will begin Thursday afternoon at 4:15, and every girl who can play hockey or thinks she can learn is urged to turn out and work for her class.

The interclass series will be almost entirely in the hands of the girls, according to Georgia Benson who is head of hockey, and it is up to them to make it a success. The instructors in the department are too busy on account of the large enrollment to give much of their time, but Miss Waterman has said that she will help the girls work out plays whenever she can.

Every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at 4:15 the girls will practice on the new hockey field back of the Woman's building. "Boom" Cannon will have charge of the Tuesday section and Georgia Benson the Thursday section. The girls who are taking hockey as their regular sport and are unable to come out at this time will have a chance to make the teams according to those in charge, but all who possibly can are urged to come to these special practices in order to work up team work.

The exact dates of the series have not been announced yet but it will probably be played the week before Homecoming or the week following.
