A Step in the Right Direction.

A short time ago the Emerald emphasized the need for a different method of handling the "drives" or fund soliciting campaigns as they are carried on each year on the campus. The action of the student council in creating a committee which will be representative of the campus opinion may be the solution. At least it is a step in the right direction.

It is impossible to prohibit "drives," but it is not impossible to restrict them. There will be discussion and a difference of opinion as the merit of the fund campaigns, perfect harmony will be impossible in such a large committee. Campus opinion may be divided upon the subject of authorizing some campaigns on the campus, but it is felt that a check can be kept by the students under the new system, something which has never been possible on the Oregon campus before.

There is no denying that students in the universities and colleges throughout the country are very liberal toward charitable causes. But the question has been raised as to just where the continual request for financial aid may lead.

Communities have been able to cope with the situation because they have established the community chest plan of one contribution for all causes. If the students are to be met with request after request, then their only solution is a similar move—a student charity chest. This should not be necessary. There must be a limitation.

With such a representative committee as that requested by the student council the questions as they arise should be threshed out carefully, and a limit set to the amount to be raised. The student council still retains the right to approve or disapprove of any plan which the committee adopts, and this should serve as a double check.

With the number of self-supporting students on the campus gradually increasing, it becomes constantly difficult to respond to the various "drives." It is a matter in which every student is vitally interested, and an immediate solution is needed.

Faculty members who lock the door of their classroom when the bell rings for classes to begin, are usually the offenders when it comes to keeping their classes over the time when the bell rings for dismissal. The lengthening distances as the University grows mean a long hike between buildings sometimes.

University men who are ex-service men should haul out the uniforms today and get into the parade. The record of Oregon is one of which we are proud; why not make it a feature in the Armistice Day parade?

Three years ago today. Did we celebrate? How about it, Buddy?

TWO CYLINDER 1905 CAR COMES OUT ON CAMPUS

Gamma Phi Halloween Present Bought by Mack McClain for $15; With New Coil Added it Runs

Where it came from no one knows. How old it is, only the geologist can venture a guess. But this we know, that Mack McClain and Cog Campbell bought it for $5, and that it has two good lungs.

On halloween evening some obliging men rolled a prehistoric automobile upon the Gamma Phi front porch. There it stood the following day, a curiosity to passing folks. Because none of the sisters were enthusiastic over the possibilities of the roadster, it was towed away with great ceremony.

But Mack, seeing the value of the car, made the purchase and gave the wagon new life with the aid of a coil. Every morning he opens the side of the machine, inserts the crank, and with a few twirls starts the coughing sound which develops into the purr of a motor peculiar to models of 1905.

Many campus notables have enjoyed a ride in the car, and as it thrusts them into the public eye Mack has no trouble getting passengers. Recently Major Baird enjoyed a ride to the city but found it rather difficult to maintain a military bearing, due to the vibration. It may become compulsory for students taking social evolution to study it as soon as the Professors hear of the car.

EDITORIALLY CLIPPED

THEIR BUGLE CALL

Students at the University of Oregon are keenly alert to the meaning of the Washington conference and are anxious to throw their leadership and weight for securing results at the great parley.

The movement is their own. They have studied the subject, pro and con. They have a background of history on which to base their conclusion that the conference should reach agreements, both for limitation of armaments and providing settlements that will remove all causes of war on the Pacific. Their studies of the world as it has been and as it could be, their realization from historical investigations that, in many respects, nations are still using the formulas of the primitive savage, is the reason for their leadership for settlements at the conference that will ultimately inaugurate a change.

Students at universities and colleges have always been in the van of resistance to kingship. They were pioneers in the movements toward democracy. Students were in the fore front of the German revolution of 1848. Students were often active and often sent to prison a generation ago for protesting against the tyranny of the czars of Russia. Students and men trained in the universities but out in the maelstrom of affairs had more factorship than any other influence in Europe in paving the way toward the overthrow of kingship on that continent.

The best investment that a nation can make is its free school system culminating in colleges and universities. On these educational agencies the hope of the nation rests. On them rests the destiny of the white races.

hall stage for the first time Wednesday night. The work of Doris Pittenger, who played the part of Helen's younger sister was commendable.

The scene was laid in the terrace at the country residence of John and did not change during the entire three acts. The setting was attractive and full of color and the costumes were modern.

The cast follows: Jean, younger sister to Helen and John, Doris Pittenger; Rex Baker, scion of the wealthy Bakers, who wants to marry Jean, Delbert Faust; Lucy, wife of John, Elizabeth Melis; Helen, assistant to Dr. Hamilton, Irene Stewart; Theodore, cousin to John, a rector who married for love and is not sorry he did it, Kenneth Armstrong; Uncle Everett, Judge Grey, Claire Keeney; John, older brother to Jean, Vern Fudge; Dr. Ernest Hamilton, Norvell Thompson; and the butler, John Ellestad.

The play was repeated last night.

STUDENTS TEACH ALIENS

Americanization Classes Held in Down Town Y. M. C. A.

An Americanization class for foreigners living in the vicinity of Eugene has been established in the city Y. M. C. A. by H. B. Seiler and Roland McIntyre, University students. Reading, writing, history, and anything which will help the foreigners towards naturalization, is taught.

Those attending the classes are very eager to learn, some of them coming from as far as 24 miles. Most of them are from the country around Eugene. They come every Tuesday and Thursday nights, rain or shine, in autos, buggies, and on horseback. There are about 30 members in the class.
