

FANTASY WILL BE FULL OF MAGICAL BUSINESS

Junior Company Will Play "Swanwhite" Dec. 7-8

Are you interested in magic? Would you like to see flowers that open and close on cue? And what would you think if you saw a large swan fly across the stage just at the correct time and wouldn't you like to see right through a woman for once?

You will have this opportunity, one never before given to the students on the campus, on December 7 and 8 when the University company will present "Swanwhite" the second play to be produced on the campus this term. "Swanwhite," a fantasy by August Strindberg, has been translated from the Norwegian into a delightful and beautiful two-act play. Never before has the company produced anything so fantastic. The stage setting is being worked out by the stagecraft class under the direction of Fergus Reddie. Particular care is being taken with every detail. It is usually the custom to cut a great deal of the business in this sort of play, but in this case all of the magic things are being used to produce a really magic effect. Perhaps the greatest bit of work along this line in the play is the appearance of two ghost mothers who are entirely transparent and can be seen walking through each other.

The cast is composed almost entirely of members of the junior company. Swanwhite is played by Lorna Coolidge and the wicked step-mother is played by Helen Enoch. The prince is played by Charles Fish and the father of Swanwhite by Edwin Keech. Margaret Nelson and Thelma Gannaway play the parts of the dead mothers. John Ellestad plays the head gardener and three maids of the step-mother are played by Hildegard Repinen, Mabel Gilham, and Sadye Eechols. This will be the last play produced in Guild hall this term but a full program can be expected for next term as work has already begun on "Belinda" and Barrie's "The Wedding Guest" is already cast.

GRADUATES HEAR BARNES DISCUSS OXFORD SYSTEM

Advantages of English University Cited by Former Rhodes Scholar at Club Banquet

Twenty-six members attended the banquet and business meeting of the Graduate Club at the Anchorage last evening. Professor Walter C. Barnes of the department of history spoke of the Graduate system at Oxford. He contrasted it with the American system. At Oxford the student reads longer, covering a much broader field, before doing any individual specialization. The student specializes much later in England than in either America or Germany.

At Oxford, according to Professor Barnes, who was a Rhodes scholar from Colorado, the graduate student is not required to attend lectures, but each student has a tutor to whom he is directly responsible for his work. The speaker enumerated several advantages in the Oxford graduate system. First, the spirit and tradition of the old school, and second, the cosmopolitan and intellectual associations made there, since there one meets students from all over the world, who have already achieved intellectual distinction. Many Oxford scholars are older men.

Graduate students at Oxford have access to one of the oldest libraries in the world, where there are many rare books and original manuscripts.

Teas and informal debates are the center of intellectual life at Oxford. It is around the tea table, asserted Professor Barnes, that scholastic problems of the day are discussed.

It was decided to have a similar meeting of the club early in January.

CHOIR MAY WEAR ROBES

Committee Discusses Purchase of Vestments for Vesper Singers

The advisability of buying vestments for the University choir to wear at Sunday afternoon vesper services was discussed Tuesday evening at a meeting of a committee appointed for the purpose. It was decided that an offering would be taken Sunday so that the people who have been enjoying these services might contribute in order to start a fund.

"Vestments will add to the attractiveness of the services," said M. H. Douglass, chairman of the committee, "and will be a recognition of the work done." They may also be used on many other occasions, such as commencement," he said.

CALLING DAY ESTABLISHED

Women Connected With Faculty to Meet Regularly in Woman's Building

A faculty "calling day" has been established. This day is to be the second Thursday in each month and all women connected with the faculty in any capacity are expected to meet in the Alumni hall of the Woman's building from 3 to 6. This "calling day" has been established to meet the desire to maintain the former pleasant friendliness of the group when it was much smaller and the desire also, to meet and know members of the group, to call on whom individually would be an impossible burden.

The afternoons are to be very informal. It is quite correct to bring the children and the mending if necessary. The first calling day is Thursday, December 8. Mrs. Eric W. Allen is chairman of the committee responsible for the working out of the plan.

FRANK R. RUTTER WRITES ON TRADE WITH JAPAN

Head of Foreign Trade Department on Campus Has Articles in Export And Shipping Journal

In the November number of "The Export and Shipping Journal" appears an article by Professor Frank R. Rutter, head of the foreign trade department of the school of business administration, entitled "The Future of Our Trade with Japan."

In this article Dr. Rutter seeks to overthrow the pessimistic forecasts of Japan's remarkable industrial growth, and the idea that our position in our foremost Asiatic market will soon be lost. On the contrary, claims Dr. Rutter, we should welcome rather than fear the industrial progress of Japan. He says that the demand is there for American made goods as great as it ever was. The radical difference here and there in economic conditions has resulted in development along diverse lines—non-competitive lines, so that America should continue to demand Japanese goods, and Japan to demand American goods.

"The Export and Shipping Journal," is published monthly by the Trade Journal Corporation at Portland. Dr. Rutter's article for it is based largely on first-hand information, received while he was serving as United States commercial attache, on the needs, customs and possibilities of trade with the Japanese.
