Where Tribute Is Due.

Add more laurels to those already won by the school of music. John B. Siefert, instructor in voice, "took the Portland musical world by storm," according to press reports, in a concert which he delivered there last week. His accompanist was Leland A. Coon, likewise an instructor here who came in for a great share of the praise for the success of the concert.

The Oregon school of music ranks among the highest in the college world, and among the instructors, whose work brings about if 'annex' is the proper word, but it this high ranking, are some of the leading artists in the country. in Portland. The spirit of the school of music must not be overlooked; its hearty cooperation is always ready at request, and the willingness and snap men's vote until they are fit to use with which instructors and students in the school take their part it, Only three of our election returns in the musical numbers often necessary to a successful meeting is body, yell leader and dean of women deserving of tribute.

John J. Landsbury, dean of the school of music, is always in the front rank among those willing to assist. Tomorrow night Oregon students are going to have a chance, the first chance in years, to hear Dr. Landsbury give a public recital. Nothing need be said of the quality of this entertainment, for it is a privilege to hear him. And furthermore, Dr. Landsbury is giving his assistance in this third number of the series of concerts which the women's league has undertaken, without remuneration. Through his aid the Woman's League may be able to clear the debt incurred last year in bringing the Portland Symphony orchestra to the campus to take part in the formal opening of the Woman's building.

The outstanding innovation at Harvard this fall is the decision to make public the undergraduates' scholastic marks. The action is taken as the result of a suggestion from the students themselves through the Student Council, and is a serious attempt to improve general standards of scholarship. Undergraduate students will be divided into six groups ranging from "Highest distinction" to "Low pass." Flat failures will be conspicuous by the fact that their names do not appear on any list.

Oregon beat Harvard to it by a year or so, but flat failures are not conspicuous by their absence on the Oregon grade sheet. Rather the opposite is the case.

Would that the frosh bonfire were yet in the construction. A certain sign board, which has recently put in its appearance, yet not on the campus, (for a wonder,) might bedeck the top of that pyre and have our heartfelt wish for a speedy consumption by the flames.

Present Cost of Paving Roads Declared Ruinous; Substitute is Sought

"The problem of finding some substitute for the present method of hard surfacing roads is one of the greatest confronting the highway engineer of Oregon," stated Herbert Nunn, chief engineer of the State Highway commission, who addressed the pre-engineering students of the University Wednesday evening. "Oregon cannot afford to pave ber roads much longer at the present cost of $20,000 a mile." Mr. Nunn said that the old type of macadam is obsolete but that the commission has worked out an improved type which can be cheaply built and maintained. Most of the improvement in the next few years will be of this new macadam, which should enable the state to put in good condition most of the necessary roads within a ressonably short time.

The lecture was illustrated by slides showing some of the problems confront ing the engineer in highway construc-
