Don't Crawl Into Your Shell.

Again and again we are reminded that there is a service to be performed for Oregon, even when we are in our respective homes during the Christmas vacation, and it is not a far cry either. It is a call for cooperation, and a continuation of the Oregon Spirit even while we are miles away from the "hello" tradition and the familiar scenes which we hold so dear.

A service to be performed and an individual responsibility for the successful performing of that service. This then must be a sort of idealistic honor system,—one that needs no coercion. A mighty response should result.

Remembering always that individual actions and deeds are the standard from which we will be judged as Oregon students, it should not be necessary to say more. Tell 'em all what we are doing, with not too much boasting. There is a distinction between boasting and boasting.

Get in touch with the alumni back in the old home town and have a heart-to-heart talk with them about what we are doing here and what we want to do. They are helping, and they want to know. Then, above all things, keep the alumni talking about that endowment plan. It means much to Oregon, and it is the way in which the alumni will show their appreciation of what we as students are doing.

An instructor in one of the advanced classes in the Economics department has requested the members of the class to submit anonymous criticisms on the method of handling the course this year thus far. His action is to be commended and with the proper spirit of constructive criticism exercised by the class, better cooperation and results will be the ultimate outcome of such a plan.

May our football warriors add new laurels in the new fields which they will enter during the holiday period. Oregon Fight will begin its conquest of the Pacific Monday. Oregon Spirit reaches out a long way, and it will be with the gridiron representatives in Honolulu, T. H.

In the "good old days," which are frequently referred to by the class of '01 and thereabouts, a statement that radio news service would ever be installed by The Emerald would have brought no end of ridicule. The world advances, and Oregon keeps pace.

And then let's all come back feeling that we have accomplished a purpose—that we have performed a real deed, a service to our University.

GROUP STUDY OF VIOLIN TO BE GIVEN NEXT TERM

Underwood Also to Offer Class Work in Orchestra Organization And Conducting

An added activity in the violin department has marked the past term at the University school of music. A group of students in the department of public school music, interested in organizing and conducting orchestras, have availed themselves of an opportunity to learn how to play the violin as part of a director's equipment.

Mr. Rex Underwood, head of the violin department, has given the instruction to this group in the form of class work instead of private lessons and much progress has been made.

Curiosity has been expressed as to why students hitherto thoroughly identified with other departments in the school of music have also taken to "fiddling" and upon receiving the explanation requests have been made by students who have never concerned themselves with music, to take part in such a class.

Mr. Underwood will have a beginning class in the winter term if as many as ten register for it. No previous knowledge of the violin is required. The class fulfills a double purpose, some students may discover an aptitude for the violin which will warrant further study and others will merely derive the pleasure afforded by being able to play in a small way. Class fees are $9.00 per term and two hours of University credit is given. Smaller groups will be organized for proportionately larger fees.

The class which began in October will continue the winter term in violin and will add to this the interesting subject of orchestration for small or large groups of instruments.

The plan of teaching all types of instrumental music to groups is being successfully carried out all over the country and is being advocated by educators as a means of giving musical opportunities to many who would not otherwise engage in music study.

The course as presented by Mr. Underwood is both interesting and valuable and holds an opportunity for all those who have a desire to study violin at a minimum expense.

JURY DAY SET FOR DEC. 12

Portland Men to Judge Work; Art League to Meet

W. G. Holford and John Bennes, prominent architects of Portland, will be the judges for the work of the students in architecture on the next jury day, December 12. The jury day will be for all the departments in the school of architecture and allied arts and awards will be made in the classes in sculpturing, fine arts and normal arts as well as in architecture. In the evening all the students will meet in the architecture building and conclude the day with announcements and of awards and refreshments. Also the first meeting of the students art league will be held at this time and it is hoped that all art majors and any others who are interested will be present.

PROFESSOR CROCKATT BACK

Professor Peter C. Crockatt is back on the campus after spending a term at the University of California where he completed all of the work for his doctor's degree except the final public examination. His thesis, "Trans-Pacific Trade" has been accepted by the department and all of the preliminary examinations taken. He will take up his work in the economics department.

SOCCER MEN MAY MEET PORTLAND IN VACATION

All-star Team of Association Offers Game on Multnomah Field; Other Games Considered

A tentative date for the varsity soccer team to play an all-star team of the Portland Soccer Association, December 31 on Multnomah field in Portland has been obtained. The offer was made by the Portland Soccer Association.

The offer will probably be accepted, if enough men can be in Portland during vacation. The men are in condition, says Coach Barnes. "Of course," he said, "they haven't done any practicing since the Homecoming game, because they did not know about this game, and because examination week was so close at hand. If this offer is accepted, the men will have to practice two or three times in Portland to get in shape."

A meeting of all soccer men is called for four o'clock this afternoon in the offices of the physical education department, to discuss the date with the Portland team and also a tentative schedule for next term. There will probably be a game with O. A. C., and possibly one with Stanford.
