

GRID STARS BACK FROM HAWAII PRAISING ISLAND HOSPITALITY

Oregon Money Refused by Warm-Hearted Honolulu; Great Time Enjoyed by Football Men Except for Few Days of Mal de Mer; Rud Brown Hero of Rescue at Waikiki; Poi and Other Mid-Pacific Delicacies Served.

By EDWIN FRASER

"The Hawaiians are certainly wonderful entertainers," is the unanimous opinion of the returned members of the victorious Oregon football team. The men say that during their stay in the Islands the people practically refused to let them spend any money, and that every spare minute of their time was taken up with some sort of entertainment, including such things as Hula dances and feasts.

Several of the men took lessons in Hula dancing, but Bill Reinhart did the old grass-skirt wiggle instinctively and was a big hit. Some of the men who took lessons with more or less success were King, Brown, and Gram. Tiny Shields tried to show the natives how to do the dance right, one evening after a big feed, but after demolishing some of the furniture gave it up.

The men all had a great time on the trip, and according to some of the reports Bill Hayward admits having one of the best times of his life. Bark Laughlin and Bill Reinhart both made their letters on this trip, by playing in the first game, which was classed as an inter-sectional contest.

Rud Brown while on the island was a hero in the surf as well as on the gridiron, according to reports which say he saved Miss Lampert of Marysville, California, from drowning. He saw her fall off a surf board while some distance from the shore, the story says, and saved her by towing her to shore. One of the Portland papers describes Brown as the "handsome, black-haired, well-built young fellow who plays end on the Oregon football team."

"Bull" Montana, hard-boiled man of the movies and wrestler, was on the same boat as the team on the trip over, and tied with Gram and Parsons in the eating contest. Montana took first in the beauty contest, say reports, with Parsons a close second. Montana wrestled with Sam Clapham, English light-heavy weight champion, while the team was on the island, but lost his match while the football men won both of theirs.

While on the trip the men met Duke Kahanamoku, the famous world champion swimmer. He took them on an automobile ride through the pineapple groves and the banana forests, and at one place several of the men after appropriating several ripe pineapples had just started eating them when Bill Hayward jazzed by in a car. The men say that Bill worked them much harder than usual that evening.

Gates, who played a halfback position on the Hawaiian team, was their big star. He formerly lived in eastern Oregon, and is contemplating coming to the University of Oregon next year. Aiken, another of the Hawaiian backs, is also considering the question of coming here next year.

"Mighty Oregon" is a popular song on the Island now say members of the team, for it was played whenever the Oregon team appeared at any important function. When the men walked down the gang plank on landing the Hawaiian band struck up this tune, and at another time when the men appeared on the street while a dance was in progress the band immediately changed the tune to that of "Mighty Oregon."

After the last game a big Hawaiian feast or "Luau" was given in honor of the Oregon team. The menu consisted of roast pig, raw fish, poi, dried fish, dried squid, and many other favorite dishes. All of the food for this feast was cooked by roasting in ti leaves. There was no sign of table utensils, and all pulled off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and went after the chuck. The men all passed up the squid, and only one or two could go the poi, which was described as tasting like dry paperhangers paste. The meal was a big success though and the men are all strong for Hawaiian foods.

All the men with the exception of the Shields brothers, "Bark" Laughlin, and "Chuck" Parsons were sick going over. Only one or two were sick on the return trip and this did not last long.

One of the reasons for the big scores over the other teams was the condition of the men, which was due directly to Bill Hayward. They were in twice as good condition as either of the opposing teams, they said.

The climate of Hawaii is changeable, the men say. The day of the first game it was cold and wet, while the second game was played on a sultry hot afternoon. The day the men were to meet the Governor it was so hot that they discarded their coats and met the Governor in their shirt sleeves. "If you want to see it rain just go to Hawaii," said some of the members in commenting on the climate.

The men all learned to paddle outrigger canoes, and ride surf boards while on the trip. While in the latter sport Rud Brown rescued the California girl from the surf.

Spike Leslie returned with a tropical parasol which he opened after alighting from the train.

The Oregon Knights were on the job and handled the team's baggage.

"Hail, hail, the gangs all here" played by the band had peculiar significance when the team alighted from the train.

The team returned on the Matson liner Wilhelmina which made the trip in 6 days, 6 hours and twelve minutes.

this year for the first time in connection with the newspaper conference. All of the representatives are invited to the "jamboree," as it is called. It will be held in the men's gymnasium and will be the final event of the conference of the year.

CONFERENCE OPENS

With the assistance of the Oregon Knights will have an opportunity to entertain the journalists at luncheon. The United Press association, several of the conference committees, including the executive committee of the editorial association, and a committee of the Oregon Publishers' association will also hold meetings at lunch.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon there will be a reception for the wives of the visiting newspapermen in the alumni hall of the Woman's building. Mrs. P. L. Campbell, Dean Elizabeth Fox, Mrs. Eric W. Allen, Mrs. Colin V. Dyment, Mrs. W. F. G. Thacher, Mrs. Robert Hall and the women of the University will be hostesses.

The speakers of the afternoon include Paul Robinson, of the Aurora Observer; H. L. St. Clair, of the Gresham Outlook; G. Lansing Hurd, of the Corvallis Gazette-Times; W. R. Smith, publisher of the Myrtle Point American and the Powers Patriot; W. F. G. Thacher, professor of advertising at the University; Hal E. Hoss, of the Oregon City Enterprise; Harry Dence, of the Carlton Sentinel; Upton H. Gibbs, of the Eastern Clackamas News at Estacada, and Mark A. Cleveland, who publishes the Stanfield Standard, the Boardman Mirror, and the Umatilla Spokesman.

Meeting Over at 5

In order to allow the visitors an opportunity to see the campus the meeting will be adjourned at 5 o'clock. Cars will be ready to take the guests to the Osburn before the banquet. The cars will be under the supervision of Oregon Knights.

The business meetings tomorrow will take up the entire morning. At noon a luncheon for the delegates will be given by the University at Hendricks hall to which all upperclassmen majoring in journalism have been invited.

A special Sigma Delta Chi meeting is being planned for Saturday afternoon for members of the fraternity who will be visitors on the campus for the conference. A number of the newspapermen are alumni members and more than a few have been elected to honorary membership. The annual Journalism Jinx is held
