Do We Want Junior Week End?

There has been considerable discussion of late about the advisability of continuing Junior Week End under the same conditions and in the same manner that has been the case for the past several years. Discussion both pro and con has been entered into, and now the junior class has put it squarely up to the decision of the Student Council as to just what course should be taken.

Some time ago a faculty member asked for student opinion on the matter through the "open forum" columns of The Emerald, but the answers were slow in coming. Now that it has become a vital student issue, let's have a little expression of student opinion in the matter.

The junior class has taken cognizance of the opposition to the continuance of the event in its present form, and it has likewise taken cognizance of the fact that many students are in favor of continuing it as a part of Oregon and an Oregon tradition. The class has very wisely awaited the action of the Student Council and of campus organizations in an effort to ascertain just what the sentiment is. It cannot be expected to wait too long in this matter.

Oregon students recognize that Junior Week End is a distinct asset to the University. They also recognize that many of the main features of Junior Week End such as the canoe fete cannot be eliminated without a suitable substitute as an attraction of merit.

There does appear to be very strong sentiment on the campus for the limitation of the week-end festivities to a two-day affair. This would necessarily eliminate automatically either the canoe fete or the senior play. Here is a matter for student opinion, and it is time for the students to take the matter seriously. Let's have a little original expression on the matter, and let some of this original expression be in the form of "open forum" communications to The Emerald.

state enrolled in correspondence courses. There were 63 from outside the state. Of the 828 enrolling, 487 were women and 341 men.

The ages of correspondence study students for 1921 range from 15 to 70. Of the 645 students reporting their ages, 139 were under 21 years of age, and 506 were over 21. Between 21 and 30 there were 348, between 31 and 40 there were 111, and there were 47 over 40. The figures indicate that students enrolling in correspondence study are more mature than the students attending classes on the campus.

Few Report Business

Only 676 students reported their occupations. There were 301 teachers, 179 students, 44 housewives, 23 farmers, 15 stenographers, and others engaged in a large number of other occupations.

There were 646 persons who reported on what preparation they had had for the courses. Out of this number only 14 had no high school training and these were persons of maturity. Only 89 others reported less than a full high school course, while 70 were high school graduates without further preparation. A total of 472 had college or normal school preparation. Of these 79 were college graduates and 31 normal school graduates.

Reading is Supervised

Since 1914 the University of Oregon has supervised the required professional reading of most of the teachers of the state. During the reading circle ending November 1, 1921, the extension division issued 4422 certificates to Oregon teachers. Each certificate represented a book read by the teacher and a manuscript carefully examined at the extension office. The extension division is also representative for Oregon of the general reading circle of the United States Bureau of Education in which there are about 150 enrollments in this state.

Visual instruction, that is slide and moving picture demonstrations, have been most popular in the last two years. At meetings where slides were shown the total attendance in 1917 was 57,503. The popularity since then has grown rapidly. The total attendance in 1921 was 110,676. At film demonstrations in 1917 there was a total attendance of 23,242. In 1921 the figure was 162,575.

from the floor. In the second half Coach Bohler shifted his line-up twice sending in Altstock, Veatch, Rockhey, Goar, and Edlunds later substituting Latham for Veatch and Zimmerman for Latham. With four minutes to play and with the Sundoggers gaining steadily the varsity stiffened and spurted, Zimmerman securing two pretty baskets in rapid succession and Edlunds ringing two nice ones for good measure. The Lemon Yellow offensive was short-lived and the gun sounded with Edmondson's proteges going strong. The two teams meet in the final game of the series tonight.

an expression quite frequently heard in the women's houses—and the office copy of the Oregonian is borrowed quite frequently by men who invariably turn to the section devoted to women's houses.

Then again, when some reporter on the Emerald wishes to find out what is the significance of Beta Gamma Sigma, he does not ask some worthy senior, but quietly calls at the Oregonian office, borrows the copy and finds out what it is.

So much for the utilitarian. The beauty of the book will lie in its photographs of campus scenes, and in its art work. The front section of the book is to be run in a softly tinted ink, which will play up to best advantage the "different" scenes of the campus that are to be featured there. Several sketches of the campus done by Oregon art students are to be used on the heavier pages which divide the book into sections.

Open Forum

Editor Emerald: I have been much interested in noticing in the press statements concerning your stand for the elimination of compulsory military training from the University.

As an enemy to war and that preparation for war which I believe so often brings the thing that is prepared for, and also as a friend to liberty of conscience, I wish to express my approval of the right efforts for the abolition of compulsory military service, especially in our educational institutions. It seems to me that any citizen of Oregon is entitled to the advantages which its educational institutions provide, without being compelled to participate in military drill, especially if he is conscientiously opposed thereto.

It is my earnest hope that no methods may be employed in this fight against compulsory military training that will prejudice the interests of your cause. And my confidence in the justice of those who have the interests of the University in their care is so great that I believe that by the right methods a change may be brought about that will make military drill no longer compulsory. With sincere appreciation of your efforts toward liberty in this matter, I am,

Sincerely yours,
 LEVI T. PENNINGTON,
 President Pacific College, and Graduate Student of The University of Oregon.

FANS BUILDING CASTLES

chosen by the coast conference to meet the team selected from the east, either at Pasadena or at some other point designed by the conference. This game would mean another opportunity such as that when Oregon played Pennsylvania and a few years later Harvard.

Added to the luster of the east-west game is the fact that the proceeds of such a contest are to be divided between the opposing teams. The receipts at the Pasadena games during the past years run up into large sums and under such an arrangement as that proposed by the coast conference, Oregon would be sure to get a good slice.

Of course all this building of "air castles" isn't making next season successful by any means, but it may be the means of indicating that the next football season is far from hopeless.

book will measure up to the higher class of college publications. Heavier paper is being used this year, and a face of type better suited to book work of this kind has been chosen. The Oregonian will be off the press and ready for distribution before Junior Week-end—but in order to get one then, the $2.50 deposit must be paid, and must be paid before tonight.

Can An Evolutionist Be A Christian?

Theme of the Rev. Frank Fay Eddy at the First Unitarian Church, Sunday morning

The sermon will be the second in the series relating to the list of question advertised in the Emerald last Saturday.

You are invited to consider some of the philosophical consequences of evolution.

The hour of service is 10:45 A. M. The church is located on the corner of East Eleventh and Ferry streets.

Aflute solo by Miss Beulah Clarke, will be the Special Musical number.
