What The Future Holds In Store.

To sit in the Emerald office and listen to the strains of "The Hungarian Rhapsody" as it was played by an orchestra in the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco last night, seems to exceed the most imaginative dream,—yet that is exactly what happened here. What possibilities such feats as these hold for the future of the newspaper,—not only the College newspaper but the great metropolitan newspaper of the age!

At the recent newspaper conference held here in which editors from practically all the city and country newspapers of the State took part, the possibilities of the radio were discussed. The little city of Bend in the interior of the State was cut off from all communication with the outer world during the severe snowstorms during November. The daily newspaper there, aware of the value of the radio, rigged up a receiving and sending outfit and Bend was supplied with bulletins of the world and state news until the storm abated.

And the possibilities of the college newspaper are almost without limit when it is considered that by means of the radiophone in the office here an orchestra playing in a hotel in San Francisco can be plainly heard. Weather reports from San Francisco are received, and messages being transmitted from all parts of the globe can be overheard.

With such vast possibilities the future must bring the day when The Emerald will be furnishing daily the gist of the world's news to its campus readers, while the strains of Sousa's band playing in New York City can be brought to Villard Hall by means of the radiophone, to furnish the musical feature of an assembly program.

To anyone so inclined, air castles built upon the radiophone can be carried up and up. And they will not be air castles; they will be prediction.

Dealing in Technicalities.

The Emerald hears an echo from the meeting of the heads of organizations yesterday, in which it was criticised by some present for having "misquoted" yesterday, in news and editorial, the action of the Student Council at their last meeting. It presents herewith the exact text of the motion which was passed by the Student Council after a lengthy debate over the new plan as outlined by the Greater Oregon Committee:

"The Student Council goes on record as favoring a properly limited Junior Week-end with invitations to be extended from the A. S. U. O., in accordance with a plan to be submitted by a committee at a later meeting of the Student Council."

No definite plan was submitted by the Greater Oregon Committee. An outline of what it was proposed to do was given by a representative of the organization, in which the plan of submitting invitations by the A. S. U. O. was the principal feature, and the representative declared that the details would be worked out later. Surely the action of the Student Council was not misinterpreted, for it adopted this feature of the Greater Oregon Committee's outline and then appointed a committee from the associated students to work out the minor details to be presented for the further action of the Council.

Let us say, the Student Council adopted the principle of the plan submitted by the Greater Oregon Committee. Would that suit the tastes of our most fastidious law students?

Here's An Easier Way.

The action taken by the heads of the organizations yesterday afternoon means practically nothing,—nothing which they could not have accomplished in their own individual house meetings. If there is to be a limitation of guests, then that is up to the organizations individually, and in view of that we would suggest that they pass a little legislation in their own houses to limit their own guests if they don't wish to give up their own little bed to the visitor.

If there is to be a limitation of the costs, then let them decide in their own house meetings to dispense with the taxis with which they meet the "rushees" at the trains, the breakfast and dinner dances they arrange for the "rushees," and the rest of the social fo-de-rol they provide for their guests.

And to the raisers of the fuss we will suggest that they talk it over in their own houses and settle these things among themselves rather than bring in the entire campus, in an attempt to quell a little petty jealousy over one house treating so many guests to "such a wonderful time," which perhaps another house can't afford.

CONSULTING ENGINEER TO ADDRESS TECHNICAL CLUB

J. P. Newell, Expert in That Line to Tell Experiences

J. P. Newell, consulting engineer of the Oregon Public Service commission and brother of W. K. Newell, University superintendent of properties, will address the Technical society tonight at 7:30 o'clock on consulting engineering and his experiences with the American and Canadian railroad systems.

Mr. Newell is nationally known as an expert in his line. He has been engaged in railroad engineering in America and Canada for more than 22 years, prior to accepting the Oregon position. "There is very little that my brother does not know about railroad engineering," said W. K. Newell, "for he has been over every foot of railroad in the Dominion of Canada. Some time ago the Canadian government appealed to the United States Interstate Commerce commission for a valuable expert to cope with the Canadian railroad problem. The commission selected my brother for the position and he was engaged by Canada for a period of 2½ years. He first worked on the Canadian Northern railroad case and then undertook the problems of the Grand Trunk system."

Prior to his work in Canada, Mr. Newell was connected with the O. W. R. & N. for 20 years. Since his return from Canada he has specialized in consulting engineering.
