

ATTENDANCE INCREASING AT EXTENSION DIVISION

Students Have Organization; Eleanor Spall at Head

The growth of the enrollment in the Portland school of the extension division of the University has been little less than phenomenal during the past five years, according to figures recently compiled by the extension division. The figures show an increase in attendance at the Portland branch in the last five years of 1015. The enrollment in 1916 was only 98, while during the fall term 1921 there were 1113 students taking work in the school.

Dr. George Rebec, director of the Portland school, said in discussing the purposes of the Portland division: "The guiding purposes of the Portland center of the University of Oregon are several, the more important being:

1. To make it possible for a large group of people to acquire some degree of higher education, or to continue or supplement their higher education, though they may not be able to drop their daily work and go to college.
2. To develop in persons the desire to go away to college, especially in those who reveal an aptitude to our classes.
3. To serve as a recruiting station for the University of Oregon by giving out information and counsel to the large number of persons who come into our office inquiring about the University—about problems of admission, selection of courses, etc.

4. To let the people of Portland know about the University; to interest them not only in a friendly way, but in a financial way to support their state University, thus justifying the Portland center as one of the greatest and most worthy means of publicity that the University can have in the state."

The Portland extension center of the University of Oregon was formally authorized and established by the Board of Regents March 10, 1917. Since that time it has filled a great need for an educational center in Portland.

The students of the Portland center this year have organized and developed a student spirit. Eleanor Spall, formerly of the University campus and now completing her work in the sociology school in Portland, is the first president. Forty-three graduate students have also organized and formed a graduate club.

Mr. Vining is a speaker of national reputation. The subjects for his six addresses have been announced as follows: "Interpreting Yourself," "Character and Types of Men," "Life Qualities that Insure Success," "Zones of Adjustment," "Knowing and Influencing Men," and "Leadership and Executive Ability."

GRADES OF PROFESSIONAL FRATERNITIES COMPARED

Averages Will Be Made to Show Scholarship Standing of Honorary Organizations

After completing the "grade sheet" in which the comparative grades of the Greek letter fraternities and residence halls were entered, the registrar's office is now compiling a "grade sheet" of the comparative grades of the professional honor fraternities of the campus.

Since membership in these professional honor societies usually depends on high scholarship, in addition to general excellence in their particular fields, the list will probably show some high ratings.

There will be no attempt at classification of the different fields that the societies cover. The educational, law, commerce, music, journalism and literary organizations will be listed together.

The registrar says that the publication of the list is being held up by the failure of the organizations to give to him authentic and up-to-date membership lists.

Comparative scholarship averages of the honor societies have never before been published and the information that the list may bring out is being awaited with interest.

SATURDAY A. M.

NO. 1

Junior Mix Doomed

to be success

The Upper Class Ghost Step, other wise known as the Junior Jazz Jinks, is all set for a wild evening. All those husky lads of the corduroy brigade, from the president down, claim that it will be "the biggest and best ever."

"No other Jinks has ever been a success," said a member of the initiation committee as he was interviewed between his morning smoke and breakfast. "They have all been the bunk. But that is no reason why this year's shinburst can not be different."

"It WILL be different!" he cried as he blew a ring and expectorated through it. "Among some of the features will be a newly swept and waxed floor, real jazz and no harmony, blind folds for the patronesses and a special druggist for men only who will fill prescriptions, at six dollars a pint."

"The committee especially requests that no one bring a cold for it has been especially arranged that every one will give a chance to catch one as a special favor of the feature dance. The supply is unlimited."

The activities are scheduled to start promptly as soon as a crowd accumulates, so if you're down town set your watch by the court house clock and grab your lunch at OBAK'S luncheonette. A date on time always goes fine, but if you're late your date may break, as Jay Dee might say. You may get there before the festivities start so in order to insure your enjoyment of every minute of the evening the committee advises you to stick a hard chocolates in your hip pocket and munch lightly on them until the jazz kings take up their duties.

The first dance is scheduled as a promenade to the tune of music. As a personal tip we advise you one and all to take advantage of this unoccupied moment and clear oral cavity of those last few toothsome bits of candy. And what ever you do don't fail to temptation and chew in your girl's ear. You might get hair in your mouth.

In the middle of the evening's program the feature dance comes. Here is where OBAK service comes in handily again, for take our advice and sneak out for a stroll with the little lady and that mild cigar we sold you this noon. You'll never regret hte act. We've got the dope, the feature is to be rotten, at least there is that chance, but you are always sure that Centerburys never are.

After the dance take your girl home. That is where she belongs. But on the way drop in for a couple of ice cream bars. Like the zebra that would be partiotic if he had the stars you will be popular if you give her a ice cream bar.

A date is like the last Lemmon Punch, if you send her a box of our chocolates,—it's inevitable.

The Ivory Soap value their good will at a million dollars. Think what yours will be if you send her a Bon Tay Gift Box.
