Inter-Sectional Competition Again

The proposal has come from Stanford University that an inter-sectional debate be arranged between the winning team of the Pacific Coast triangular debate conference and the winner of an eastern or middle western debate conference. Oregon should be especially interested in this proposal, for Oregon has won the honors in the Pacific Coast Triad for the past two years, and the opportunities to go into larger fields cannot be overlooked.

The East will never forget or forgive the West for the decisive defeats which have been administered in intercollegiate athletic competition,—yet the East still shrugs its shoulders as if to say, "Our institutions of higher education maintain a much higher level than those of the West." It is an accepted theory that students will not attend competitive debate; they are more interested in the physical combat of athletic contests than in the battle of oratorical prowess. Interest in forensics must be built up.

Scholarship has not lost its proper perspective through the interference of athletic competition, in colleges and universities. The universities of the West which have triumphed over those of the East on the athletic field must prepare to defend themselves in the intellectual arena also. The proposed plan of intersectional debates presents an opportunity.

Coach Bohler

In spite of the fact that the Varsity basketball team has just passed through one of the most disastrous schedules in history, George M. Bohler who coached that team has retained the practically unanimous confidence of the students. This is rather remarkable and is a tribute to the coaching ability and personality of the coach.

Bohler declares that he has the highest esteem for Oregon students and that the spirit of the Oregon teams has never been excelled in any college in the country. He has been looking to the future and has sacrificed his reputation as a coach of basketball this year to assure success another season. Students familiar with the situation and the other members of the coaching staff declare that Coach Bohler's proteges have shown a remarkable improvement since the opening of the season this year, and that with the experience they have gained he should have an excellent squad next fall.

If the apparent misunderstandings which have arisen in the school of physical education cannot be amicably settled and Coach Bohler retained as coach here, then it will be a pity. Coach Bohler has earned the whole-hearted support of the students, which many coaches cannot do in a lifetime; his methods have been clean. If a conciliation is possible, then it behooves all interested parties to do everything in their power toward that end.

Misunderstandings can be settled without a loss of pride; to give and take is a quality we all should possess. The Emerald hopes that the misunderstandings in this case can be cleared up once and for all and the Oregon spirit thrive.

No, We Can't Be Serious

It appears to be a favorite argument when new plans are suggested that the students do not agree with, that these disagreements are not serious, and that the social standpoint has always been considered by the student. How long is this sort of "side issue tactics" to be pursued?

The student opinion voiced against the Saturday classes and the six-day week is serious and is not based on any so-called "social point of view." Students are human, and by the time they arrive at college are in a position to give serious thought to questions which vitally concern them.

FORTY-FOUR TURN OUT FOR GIRLS RIFLE TEAM

Preliminary Exercises Given at Meeting Saturday

Approximately 60 girls have turned out for rifle practice among whom there are a number who have never handled a rifle before but who never-the-less are making good scores.

Forty-four girls were present at the first meeting of the girls' rifle team, which was held in the R. O. T. C. barracks last Saturday morning. Fifteen additional girls signed for practice Monday. Preliminary rifle exercises were demonstrated and performed Saturday morning by the girls present, and schedules were made out by the girls, marking the hours on which they were free and desired to practice on the range. A schedule has been made out by Lieutenant M. E. Knowles, coach, and copies have been posted in the barracks and have been sent to each living organization. It is planned to divide the girls into four teams.

"The girls have taken a great interest in the team and have turned out well," said Major Baird, "Many who had never fired a rifle before have made excellent scores."

Cadet Major Sloan, who is assisting Lieutenant Knowles in the work of instruction said, "The girls are certainly showing up well. We are planning a doughnut competition shortly. We will organize the teams in the next week or two and we expect to have the shoot-off about the first of next term. The houses are all responding well to the idea of having a girls' rifle team, and I expect that we will be able to have something better than doughnut shoots before the year is over. "Shoots with O. A. C., California and some middle western universities are being arranged," he said.

"We want every girl to at least try out," said Coach Knowles, "I hope that the girls who were present at the meeting last Saturday will not be discouraged with the fact that we did not start shooting at once. The work last Saturday was simply preliminary, and we will start on the real work at the regular schedule periods, this next week."

A few of the girls who have turned out have their own rifles, which they prefer to use rather than those furnished by the military department. Shooting stands have been constructed and covered with army blankets to permit the girls to shoot comfortably from the prone position.

The shooting yesterday again revealed some high scores. Wave Anderson registered a score of 94 out of a possible 100. According to Coach Knowles, this is the fourth highest score ever made by either man or woman at the University range. Coach Knowles remarked that this was especially good since it was made on an N. R. A. target, in which the bullseye is exceptionally small. "Miss Anderson had never touched a rifle before she came out for the team," said Coach Knowles, "and I'm sure that other girls can make good scores also, if they are only willing to try."

The 10 girls standing highest on the team bulletin board at the R. O. T. C. barracks in order of rank are: Wave Anderson, Margaret Seymour, Wanda Daggett, Martha Pickens, Winifred Hobson, Katherine Freeman, Dorothy Chausse, Elizabeth Stephenson, Jane Huson, Frances Cochran.

COUNCIL OPPOSES PLAN

The necessity that is felt by a great number of University students for a full day off for work on Saturdays was also a factor in bringing the council to its final decision. This is the matter referred to in its resolution as "contained in reports from campus organizations." It was the general opinion in the various groups on the campus that the adoption of a six-day week would work a hardship on the self supporting student who needs a whole day on Saturday in order to stay in school.

There was some favorable discussion of a plan to extend the six-day recitation plan to the various departments of school who need more time for recitations, leaving the rest of the school on the present basis. The science departments were considered as those which this proposition would most help. No definite action along this line was taken.

The council also passed a resolution to the effect that down town college dances be conducted in accordance to the regulations of the University and that they be properly chaperoned.
