

HOUSEHOLD ART GIRLS FEED UNEXPECTED GUEST

Practical Work Being Done
by Department

"The unexpected guest," the horror of all housewives, is the subject of practice luncheons being conducted by the cooking classes of the household arts department, under Miss Lillian Tingle. The luncheons are prepared by individual members of the classes in periods of three days each. The object is to prepare a luncheon, satisfying, tasteful and digestible within a limited length of time and within a limited outlay of expense.

One dollar is the expense limit for a luncheon for five persons, with a possibility of a sixth "dropping in." In case of the arrival of the "unexpected guest," the hostess must "stretch" things to reach so much farther, and it is in this sudden adjustment to circumstances that the student learns the practical lessons of food management and resourcefulness.

Each student is given $1.00 with which to make all the purchases for her luncheon, and all the buying, cooking and arranging is done by herself.

Luncheon Attract Faculty

The luncheons have been served during the past few weeks to members of the faculty of the department of Home Economics with an occasional outside member who attends within 15 minutes notice.

An interesting display held recently in the clothing section of the department of household arts was the Fashion show presented by the students in dress design and sewing. Each student acted as her own live model, presenting her own work in this manner. The exhibit was open only to members of the classes and the faculty of the department.

Frocks are Designed

The classes in sewing and design are now doing some very interesting work in flower designing and decorations. Successful results have been accomplished also in the making of wool dresses and evening frocks. At present special problems are being offered the classes in designing and making clothes for persons outside the classes, which offers experience in working with various models and figures. The members of the class create their own patterns which involves the study of textiles, materials and design.

Some interesting work being done by the department is the collection being made of materials for the study of textiles, weaves and dye, and identification of fiber. These materials will be kept and added to for the benefit of the classes in this work.

Furniture is Doctored

Old furniture is being renovated by members of the classes in home decoration, and the results of a little paint and sandpaper are remarkable, as shown in the articles being completed. This is an interesting and practical line of work which is being done by members of this department.

A change in some of the courses in the department of home economics is contemplated for next term, but as yet nothing definite has been announced.

EUROPEAN OUTLOOK

early in 1919, they could have carried on the blockade plan that was being used to put Europe on its feet. The officials running the blockade at that time were keen on this plan. Unfortunately all the schemes in this direction were dropped, and you lost your opportunity to control the economic reconstruction of Europe.

"Those responsible for the Genoa conference, though talking about the conditions in central Europe, were interested in the conditions in the British Isles and the United States. Europe is getting along pretty well at the present time by underselling the other countries. But there are two million unemployed in England. I am an optimist and when I saw the window dressing going on in Europe for the Genoa conference, I knew that conditions were all right. The farmers of the conference know now that convalescence is well on its way in Europe."

Dr. Zimmern called attention to a fact concerning the financial depression in Europe. "It is really instability of foreign currency," he said, "rather than its low value which has been a hindrance to trade."

Stability is Increasing

"There has been a steady increase of stability in Europe. The League of Nations has survived Europe's tension. An astonishing fact concerning the League is that its sessions in general assembly are not so important as the organization of the Secretariat. The subordinate staff of this office is comprised of all different nationalities. The representatives of these different countries are working together and have each other's confidence. That's why I believe the League has a real future. Looking at it from the standpoint of organization it has accomplished something. The officials of the League are justified in saying that it has made good."

In speaking of the relations between France and England he said, "We hoped that after the war the principle of the balance of power had passed away and that we would look forward to what is called the 'concert of Europe.' The mass of the public in both England and France wish the two countries to be friends. But there has been a great deal of mischief making and wholly unnecessary friction. Reparation is one of the causes of this. England is to blame for the virtually trebling of the reparations bill. The reason for this has been not to punish Germany or be repaid in enormous sums for the damage done, but an aim to get greater proportion of what Germany is able to pay by rendering the large bill. But England has heaped item upon item on the bill and has been lenient with Germany in regard to demanding compliance. On the other hand France has rendered a smaller bill and has pressed Germany to pay. For this reason the blame of excess reparation has fallen unjustly on the shoulders of France."

Mutual Confidence Returning

"Since 1914 the condition of mutual confidence has been coming back by degrees. I believe that in time confidence will be established with all our late enemies. But don't rush up too fast. People at a distance have been taking the sportsmanship attitude of forgiving and forgetting. Give us time patience, don't scold or dictate us, and above all don't mix an economic question with a sentimental one. There has been danger of misunderstanding between your country and the allied powers, because you have become obsessed with the idea of dictating to us. You have no more right to do this than we have to dictate to some smaller central countries such as Czechoslovakia, or Jugo-Slavia."

Lectures at Hut Today

Dr. Zimmern arrived in Eugene yesterday and will deliver the first of his lectures this afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. hut at 3 o'clock. It will be a meeting for discussion in which the speaker will talk on "What is Europe." Provision is being made for all social science classes to meet with Dr. Zimmern at this occasion. Anyone else who is interested is invited to attend.

Tonight at 8 o'clock at Villard hall a general meeting open to the public will take place. Dr. Zimmern will speak on "The World after the War."

Tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. hut the last of his lectures will be held. He will address journalism and history students on the subject of "Newspapers and Contemporary History."

Dr. Zimmern is known as a very interesting speaker. He is said to be very well qualified to speak on the subjects he has chosen. He is a prominent historian and has made a study during the war and is acquainted with conditions there after the war. Some interesting information is promised those that attend his lectures.

The Zimmerns will return to Portland on Friday. During their stay here they are being entertained by Dean and Mrs. Colin V. Dymont.

German Attitude Unchanged

Mrs. Zimmern, who is a French woman, when called on for an address, made a plea for a more sympathetic understanding of France's situation and aims. Speaking from study augmented by close-range observation in Germany, Mrs. Zimmern emphasized that France can not disarm while the Germans are in their present frame of mind. "The Germans, with the exception of the lower classes, have not changed their attitude toward France," she said. "France is afraid of their power, and she can not disarm materially while Germany is not disarmed mentally and spiritually."

Mrs. Zimmern is thoroughly agreed with her husband in his estimate of Lloyd George and Poincare. The new French premier was painted as a scholar and thinker in contrast with the British leader, who was characterized by both as a believer in doing the thing that seemed politically expedient. Both Mr. and Mrs. Zimmern rejoiced alike in the apparent imminence of the fall of the Lloyd George administration, believing that a new British premier would work in better harmony with the French.

The speaker made an earnest appeal that the real seriousness of France be understood and that the old idea of country as light and frivolous be abandoned. Of the ultimate cooperation of both British and America with France, neither speaker had any doubt, and the whole note of the evening was one of optimism for the future of Europe.

SALES TALK CONTEST SCHEDULED FOR TODAY

Insurance Companies Offer
Prizes for Competition

The judges will be E. N. Strong, assistant general manager of the Oregon Life Insurance company, G. M. Sprague, resident manager of the Mutual Life company and another Eugene man whose name has not yet been announced. A. L. Mills, president of the Oregon Life company and speaker at today's assembly will also be present.

The essay on salesmanship will be graded on three points; the principals of life insurance, the functions of life insurance and the selling of life insurance.

The oral part of the contest will be the solution of six selling problems, one contestant taking the part of the salesman and the other of the buyer. The problems will be to interest the following in life insurance:

A physician, 39, with wife and two children, carries $10,000 insurance and spends $500 to $1000 yearly in speculation. A school teacher, 42, married and thinks that he can invest his money himself; A man buying a business at $2,500 yearly and carrying $5,000 insurance, married and has two children; young lady, lives at home and earns $135.00 monthly, is supporting aged mother; machinist, 36, wife and three children, $2,000 insurance and tries questionable investments; Smith and Jones, merchants, business valued at $30,000, carry $6,000 and $4,000 respectively, no insurance on business.

SALES TALK CONTEST TO BE HELD THURSDAY

Insurance Companies Offer Prizes; Competition to be Held at
Chamber of Commerce

Budding salesmen and saleswomen in the school of business administration are an excited group this week. Strange sounds issue from apparently unoccupied class rooms, and great preparations are in progress. Enthusiastic selling talks are the order of the day.

Thursday night at the Eugene Chamber of Commerce over a dozen students will compete for prizes in the first annual life insurance selling contests, conducted under the auspices of the school of business administration. The Oregon Life Insurance company is offering a large cup, upon which the winner's name is to be engraved, and also a small cup, which will be the permanent trophy of the student taking first prize. The contest will consist of both oral and written tests. The Mutual Life Insurance company is also offering a prize, one of $25, which will be given under the same conditions.

Those who have signed up, thus far, to compete are: Helen Nelson, Mrs. V. R. McDougle, Cecil Bell, Floyd Bowles, Francis Beller, Wilson Gally, Newton Harrell, Dix Holaday, Harold Brown, Jas. E. Whitaker, Ralph Couch, George Neile, I. W. Lewis.

SPRING VACATION SHORT FOR EXTENSION WORK

One and One-half Hours Most Which Can be Obtained From Week's Work in Correspondence Division

Spring vacation of nine days will be a short period for students to register in the school of correspondence, and to complete their courses, according to Dan E. Clark of the extension division. In order to complete any work by correspondence in so short a period, a student must not only have enrolled in the course, but must have done a good part of the work on this course. As the correspondence study department does not permit students enrolled in the University to carry work by correspondence at the same time, the student must secure the approval of the major professor, the dean of the campus school in which he is registered, and the secretary of the extension division to enroll for vocational work. Not more than three papers from any one course may be sent to the correspondence study department for correction during one week, without the approval of the major professor, the dean of the school wherein registered, and the secretary of the extension division. One and one-half week's work and, practically the only courses of less than three hours which are offered, are reading circle courses for teachers.

GIRLS DISCUSS WORK

The members of Pot and Quill met last night in the Art building to work on and discuss the manuscripts for their magazine. This was the last meeting of the term. It is the custom to sit around a table and criticize the work of the different members in the club.
